Lewis Won't Attend WLB Coal Meeting Here Today

New Crisis Near In Mine Situation; Truce of 15 Days Expires Tomorrow

The OWI's Idea

Defiance

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, continued his defiance of the War Labor Board last night by announcing in New York that he would not attend or be represented at the conference summoned by the WLB today to arrange for resumption of negotiations in the soft coal mine dispute.

Lewis' statement brought a new crisis in the coal production situation, with the 15-day truce under which the miners resumed work on May 3 after a brief mine shutdown expiring tomorrow night.

Says He's Ready to Talk

The mine union chief, while continuing his policy of having nothing to do with the board, which he has accused of prejudging his case, declared the miners are ready to resume negotiations with the bituminous operators at any time the latter show up, and he added that "in the light of all facts we think that such a conference would be fruitful."

He charged that the labor board "has demonstrated the malignity of its purpose to block the making of a wage agreement," said the board panel hearing on the dispute without the presence of the miners was a "colossal farce" and added:

"We do not believe that the War Labor Board any longer has jurisdiction over this controversy. We believe that the jurisdiction and responsibility lie with the agent of the Government now in charge of the coal mines" (Secretary of Interior Ickes.)

He would not comment for the present on what effect the miners' refusal to attend today's conference here would have on the continuation of coal mining.

Accused Operators

Though Lewis has given no indication of his course after tomorrow night if no settlement has been agreed upon, various district boards of the United Mine Workers have declared there would be no work in their districts after midnight Tuesday night unless a contract has been negotiated by that time.

Ickes, Government boss of the mines as Fuel Administrator, had no comment on Lewis' statement, but Wayne L. Morse, public member of the WLB, told the Associated Press:

"I expect all parties to all labor disputes to comply with the judicial processes of the War Labor Board. The mine dispute, like all other disputes, falls within the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board under Executive Order 9017, which created the board in accordance with labor's and industry's agreement with the President of the United States. I am confident that the American people will expect that the same rules shall be applied to this dispute as to any other."

Questions Advantage

Edward H. Burke, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, said the operators would appear before the board today as directed, commenting, however:

"I don't know if there is any advantage to resuming if one of the parties declines to be present . . . However, that is up to the board."

The operators previously had taken the stand that further negotiations would be unproductive and had urged the War Labor Board to take jurisdiction of the dispute. Lewis, in turn, had denounced the operators for "breaking off" negotiations in order to come to Washington for the WLB hearing on the dispute April 24, a hearing which the miners refused to attend. Lewis had contended that the operators' action had "breached" the agreement by which the mines were kept open after the operating contract expired April 1, and the union men, as a result, quit work at the end

Treasury Hope Of Payroll Tax May Deter Veto

Legislators Predict It Will Become Law Without Signature

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Treasury's desire to obtain a payroll tax of at least 20 per cent was cited by informed legislators yesterday as an indication President Roosevelt may not veto "skip-a-year" revenue legislation if it wins final congressional approval.

The threat of a possible veto has hung over efforts of bipartisan supporters to force early House acceptance of the major provisions of the Senate's pay-as-you-go measure, which would abate the lesser of either 1942 or 1943 taxes for all individuals except those with "windfall" incomes.

President Roosevelt has objected to the Ruml plan on the ground it would reduce Government revenue. The Treasury, however, favors a payroll levy system of current payments against tax liabilities, and it was represented yesterday as contending that a 20 per cent withholding of wages and salaries, such as is embodied in the Senate bill, ought to be put into operation July 1 as an additional safeguard against inflation.

May Not Sign If

This viewpoint also has been taken by other Government agencies concerned with holding the line against inflationary increases in prices, wages and other stabilization factors. Because of this fact, the feeling was expressed in some quarters that Mr. Roosevelt might let the bill become law without his signature, but with criticism of the principles involved.

Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia of the Senate Finance Committee, who opposed the modified Ruml plan adopted by the Senate Friday, told reporters he thought it imperative to inaugurate a payroll tax as soon as possible.

The Treasury has said it must know soon if such a tax is to be levied in order to prepare collection machinery for the July 1 headline. George added that if collections are not begun then there is little hope of instituting such a system until January 1.

Hopes for Compromise

The Georgia Senator, however, obviously retained hope that a conference between Senate and House committees might eventually produce a compromise in line with the plan which he submitted and the Senate defeated—to abate

40,000 Watch Air Mail Show On Birthday

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

Even the Weather Man—at the last minute—decided to cooperate yesterday and let 40,000 enthusiastic spectators see six hours of uninterrupted air thrills at Washington National Airport in observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of commercial air mail.

Until the program got fully under way at 1:30 p. m.—a "low ceiling" threatened to dampen the full possibilities of a successful air show. But by the time the aerial acrobatics got going blue was in the heavens and "visibility right."

Of celebrities and aircraft there were sufficient to thrill the most jaded. Cabinet members, high Army and Navy officials, war heroes, famous names of the early days of air travel, all were present.

All Sorts of Aircraft

There were huge Army transports that gave a demonstration of air evacuation of wounded fighting men. There were Vought-Corsairs showing their speed and maneuverability before the cheering crowd. In contrast there was a slim, fast ship, bearing the Army Air Force Star but originally emblazoned with the Rising Sun of Japan.

The ship was piloted by Lieut. Comdr. Thomas Booth who put it through its paces.

Navy Plane Lost Since January Found in Arizona

Flagstaff, Ariz., May 16 (AP).—The wreckage of a Navy cargo plane missing since January 21 with six men aboard was found today by a high school hiking club on the San Francisco peaks.

Sheriff Peery Francis said the plane was "pretty badly torn up," and that all the bodies had been found.

When the plane was three days overdue on its flight from Kansas City to San Pedro, Calif., the Navy said those aboard were:

Pilot: Lieut. Max S. Knudsen, Kansas City, Mo.; copilots, Lieut. Albert Plotkin, Kansas City, Mo.; Lieut. (j. g.) Phillip H. Pitts, jr., Birmingham, Ala. chief radioman, Cullen A. Snyder, Central City, Pa.; aviation machinist's mate, Wilford De Booth, Cainesville, Mo.; seaman, second class, Don J. Steele, Carmichaels, Pa.

Gas Shortage To Close Many D. C. Stations

Motorists Facing Near Famine as Supplies Dwindle

"Many" filling stations in Washington will be forced to close during the coming week due to gasoline shortages, a spokesman for the dealers said yesterday.

"We simply are living from day to day," he said. "Obviously the military and naval people would be foolish to let it be known a week or more in advance when they are going to require gasoline in large quantities. This would be a dead tip-off to the enemy.

"So all we can do is to wait patiently to see what each day will bring forth."

He said that during the last two weeks a majority of the filling stations in the city were without gasoline at one time or another.

Stocks here are "awfully short," he said. This situation was going to be made more acute by reason of the recent order of Harold L. Ickes Petroleum Administrator, giving farmers Army and Navy status in gasoline priorities, he predicted.

"I believe that for the duration motorists will find they have to drive to several stations before they are able to get the gasoline they need," he concluded.

OPA Opens Drive Against Illegal Potato Sales Here

Robert K. Thompson, District OPA administrator, said last night he planned to have inspectors at the Northeast Market, in the vicinity of Florida Avenue and Fifth Street, beginning tonight.

The announcement came as an aftermath of a news story published in The Post to the effect that black market potatoes were easily obtainable in Washington.

"Our men have been busy on other work for the past week or so," Thompson said. "We have only a limited staff and our facilities are heavily taxed in policing the Washington markets.

"However, I appreciate the information The Post was able to give and we will act on it to the best of our ability."

9-Man War Meat Board Is Created

Chicago to Be Nerve Center of More Equitable Distribution Plan

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

As a joint move to facilitate a proper handling of the Nation's meat supply thus insuring a fair and equitable distribution to areas that have been by-passed due to emergency war conditions, the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration yesterday announced establishment of a War Meat Board.

The nine-man board, members to be named later, will operate from Chicago and serve as the "nerve center" for the entire wartime meat management program.

It will undertake the job of making effective the allocation and distribution of the national meat supply among the armed forces, civilians and lend-lease agencies, taking into account the total quantity of the food available from "day to day and week to week."

Most Complex Problem

The board was set up, an OPA-WFA statement said, because regulation of the livestock and meat industry "involved the most difficult and complex of all food problems encountered thus far in the war effort."

Two of the "hottest" food problems kicking around the country today have to do with the question of price ceilings for livestock and the problem of getting adequate meat supplies into areas teeming with warworkers but off the beaten distribution paths.

Among meat problems mentioned in the statement were:

1. Wide decentralization of the industry, which adds "greatly to the complexities of adequate Government controls."

2. The wide variation both by seasons and areas in the movement of livestock to market, and the wide variation in demand by seasons and areas. This variation, it has been pointed out by groups clamoring for more meat, received no consideration under rationing which allotted to every person on a strict per capita basis, regardless of profession or location.

Must Be Moved Quickly

3. Meat must be moved into consumption quickly because it is perishable. This "necessitates a flexible and active administrative control."

4. Wartime regulations substituted for normal market influences have brought "black markets, price squeeze on slaughterers, difficulty in procuring requirements of the armed forces and lend-lease, and maldistribution among civilians."

"All of these difficulties," WPA officials explained, "are traceable to the lack of balance between demand and supply."

Chinese Report Heavy Fighting In North Hunan

Chungking, May 16 (AP).—A Chinese high command communique indicated today that fighting had developed in intensity around Tungting Lake in northern Hunan Province where the Japanese were said to be attempting to sever communications between Hunan and Szechwan Province, seize the richest rice producing areas of China, and possibly prepare for a full-scale attack against the town of Changsha.

The communique said the Japanese were advancing in the area west of the lake and that they had occupied one town and reached the outskirts of Tsingshih.

Germans Raid London, Allies Lash at Berlin, Hitler's 'Atlantic Wall'

Rumor Victor Emanuel Abdicated

Hitler About to Leave Italy Flat, 2 London Newspapers Report

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Monday), May 17.—Two London dailies reported this morning that Hitler is preparing to abandon Italy to her fate, leaving her to face the threat of Allied invasion unaided.

A front-page story by the Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent, headlined "Hitler withdrawing from Italy," said German officials and Gestapo men now were returning to Germany and that there were unmistakable signs that Nazi troops in Italy might soon withdraw, establishing defenses at Brenner Pass.

Earlier, the Morocco and Algiers radio reported what they termed "a sensational rumor" in Rome that King Vittorio Emanuele would abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Umberto. Rumors of imminent invasion are sweeping through Italy, said the broadcasts, heard by the ministry of information.

(The Morocco radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission in New York, said in a Bern dispatch that the King "is alleged to have abdicated, and the Roman cabinet to have offered its resignation to Mussolini, who refused it.")

Invasion Tide
By the Associated Press

London (Monday), May 17 (AP).—German planes raided London early today, but the attack—the heaviest since last February—was puny compared to the Nazi blows of 1940 and 1941.

The planes, guided by a brilliant "bombers' moon," came up over the Thames and fanned out over the London area after breaking through a heavy antiaircraft barrage on the city's outskirts. There were two alerts.

A thunderous explosion of undetermined cause was heard throughout the city soon after the sirens sounded.

High explosives dropped on one London area caused damage and some casualties. Other planes bombed a place in the home counties.

Apartment House Hit

A bomb shattered a large apartment house in a London suburb before the second all-clear was sounded, and an elderly widow and a baby were injured. Several houses and hotels also were damaged.

Swift R. A. F. Mosquito bombers attacked Berlin and other targets Saturday night, and Allied fighters, including American high altitude Thunderbolts, raked Hitler's "Atlantic wall" positions yesterday in the rolling preinvasion sky offensive.

American Thunderbolt pilots destroyed two German aircraft and damaged several others in two sweeps across the Channel. One fighter failed to return.

"Only two small flights of enemy aircraft were sighted, and United States Army Air Force pilots flying the newest high altitude fighters were able to close and engage both formations with good results," a United States headquarters announcement added.

New 'Class'

More Spies Head for U.S., Says Hoover

Germany is about to unleash against the United States and her Allies another class from her crack Berlin school for saboteurs, from which graduated the eight Nazis who were landed from submarines on American shores with plans to wreck United States war plants, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, warned yesterday.

Calling on every American citizen—"whether on the farm, in a small town or in a metropolis"—to consider himself or herself an individual "listening post" for the FBI, Hoover cited numerous cases in which, but for the "tips" given by watchful citizens, all efforts to crack alien spy and sabotage rings might have failed.

No Successful Act Yet

While a recent report of the bureau stated there had been no single successful foreign-directed act of sabotage in this war, Hoover said:

"Unless Americans give their help, the FBI cannot guarantee to maintain its present remarkable record.

"Never was the need for citizen cooperation greater than at this very time. More than a score of saboteurs are being trained by the German high command at this (Berlin) highly organized sabotage school, to be sent to all parts of the world to obstruct the war effort. Some of these Nazi agents will try to enter the United States. We

Von Arnim Arrives In England In R.A.F. Plane

London, May 16 (INS).—Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, former Axis North African commander taken prisoner by the British First Army in Tunisia last Wednesday, arrived in England by plane today under conditions of rigid secrecy.

The German general, flown from North Africa by the R.A.F., reached an airport in southern England early in the morning and was handed over to representatives of the British War Office who brought the high-ranking prisoner to London.

The secrecy imposed on von Arnim's movements in British custody was due to a desire to observe scrupulously the Geneva convention which requires that prisoners of war should not be exposed to public curiosity.

Allies Battle Japs for Base In New Guinea

Foe's Raid Sparks Engagement With Yanks and Aussies

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia, May 16. — Jungle-fighting Australians and Americans, after weathering an attack by 40 enemy dive-bombers, are locked in an important battle with the Japanese only 5 miles below Salamaua, New Guinea.

The decision, still in the balance after the first enemy onslaught was repulsed Saturday, might go far toward deciding whether Japan is to maintain its hold on the Huon Gulf, with its deep ship anchorages and good airdromes. Conversely, the fate of Allied advanced jungle positions is at stake.

Fighting at Bobdubi

The fighting centers on the village of Bobdubi which the Allies seized May 6 in a surprise move intended to outflank and cut the supply routes to the first line of defense of the Japanese at Mubo, 12 miles down the coast from Salamaua.

Sensing the danger to both Salamaua and Lae offered by constant northward infiltrations of Allied troops, Japan flung 98 planes at Bobdubi and at Wau, mountain-encircled Allied base with an airdrome, 35 miles southwest of Salamaua.

Although there was no Allied interception and none of the big raiding force was claimed as shot down, a spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur indicated in his summary of preliminary reports that the enemy did not accomplish much.

Ten Planes Strafed

[Ten Japanese planes were machine-gunned on the ground at Lae Saturday, the Allied high command reported today (Monday).

[One Japanese fighter was destroyed and a bomber was damaged badly in an aerial engagement over Cape Ward Hunt, New Guinea, the noon communique said.

[Heavy bombers attacked the dispersal areas of Vunakanau airdrome at Rabaul, on the northeast tip of New Britain Island, at night. Across the island at Gasmata another four-engined warplane bombed the airdrome while still another bombed and strafed the airdrome and buildings at Cape Gloucester.]

At Bobdubi, Allied troops avoided dislodgement in the initial stages of the dawn ground attack despite the fact the enemy timed it with, first, an aerial strike of nine bombers and 15 fighters, and then the 40 dive bombers.

U. S. Casualties Set At 150 Men Daily; Axis Losses, 600

New York, May 16 (AP).—Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh, representative of the War Department's industrial services division, declared today that American war losses amounted to more than 150 men—dead, wounded and captured—daily, but that the enemy was losing four times that many.

Addressing a conference of Local 338 of the C. I. O. Retail, Wholesale and Chain Store Food Employes Union, Ginsburgh said the Mediterranean campaign "is no more than the opening skirmish for the vast, bloodier struggle on the soil of Europe."

"The going will be much rougher and tougher very soon," he added. "Even now our casualties have been severe. Every day we are losing more than 150 men—dead, wounded, captured—in this war. For every man we lost, our enemies lose four, but do not belittle our losses. . . .

"Our casualties will multiply, but our men in the field will win."

WAACS Mark 1st Anniversary At Home and in War Zones

Army requests for 90,000 more WAAC personnel is the Army's tribute to the corps, Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, its director, said yesterday on the Army Hour radio program. She spoke from Washington on the anniversary of taking her oath of office. Her talk was part of weekend celebrations being held wherever the WAAC now is stationed.

A year ago, the women's army was on paper only, she said, but now 62,500 are at work to hasten victory—more than 100 WAAC companies are in the field with ground forces, air forces and service forces. WAACS engaged in these services also spoke—from North Africa, the States, and England, where Capt. Anna W. Wilson said the WAAC would take over effectively noncombat jobs in England to release our men for fighting when the European invasion comes.

In Washington, the red, white and blue, 16-inch official WAAC birthday cake cutting was held at the women's division USO, 1814 N Street Northwest, where Maj. Betty Bandel, deputy director and head of the WAAC section of the Army Air Forces, officiated. About 45 members of the corps stationed here gathered in ceremonies which were duplicated throughout the Nation at the same time in other USO clubs.

Guests at the Washington celebration included Capt. Louise Goeden, of headquarters technical information; Anne Sarachon Hooley, assistant director of the National Catholic Community Services who was the representative of the Seventh Corps Area as one of nine women to select the first group of WAAC applicants for training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

Meanwhile elaborate parades and celebrations were held at Fort Devens, Mass.; Camp Ruston, La.; Camp Polk, La., Monticello, Ark., and Daytona Beach, Fla., all WAAC training centers. At Fort Des Moines, 7000 took part in one of the largest WAAC parades ever held, while a 4½-foot high birthday cake was presented personnel at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Convalescent Soldiers Enjoy Swank Girls' School Elegance

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

The girls are gone from the spacious schoolrooms of National Park Seminary at Forest Glen, Md. Four hundred enrolled last fall only to find that war had invaded even this quiet retreat.

There are hundreds of uniforms at Forest Glen today—not the pastel skirts and "Sloppy Joe" sweaters of the schoolgirl, but a maroon affair—the garb of the convalescent soldier.

When the War Department bought the seminary last September it had two things in mind—to provide an annex to overcrowded Walter Reed Hospital for housing convalescent servicemen, and to give those men an atmosphere in which they could recover phychologically as well as physically.

Virtually nothing of the hospital is in evidence save possibly the neat dress of Army nurses and Red Cross aides.

The 182 acres are as handsomely landscaped as they have been since 1898, when the seminary opened as a finishing school for debutantes. The main building, sorority houses, dining rooms and ballroom—all are as the girls left

Military Guard of 200 to Add Wartime Touch to Food Parley

By Wade Werner

Hot Springs, Va., May 16.—In an idyllic setting abounding with rocking chairs, steel-helmeted soldiers took up guard today over the Homestead Hotel, scene of the first United Nations meeting on postwar problems—the food conference opening Tuesday.

About 200 soldiers have the task of keeping intruders out of the conference grounds. Of this garrison 139 are quartered in the 600-room hotel which will house all the delegates from 43 nations and the members of the conference secretariat.

It is a streamlined conference setup. All the delegates will live and work under the same roof—a contrast, for example, with League of Nations meetings at Geneva where delegations were scattered through a score of hotels except for actual sessions in the league buildings.

The setting of this conference to discuss a postwar world free from want is a picture of comfort and relaxation amid the beauties of a 17,000-acre estate in the Alleghenies Mountains.

1300 Nazi Planes Reds' 2-Week Toll

Foes' Losses 3 to 1 In Ferocious Drive On Rear Line Bases

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), May 17.—The Red air force has destroyed 1300 German planes in two weeks, Moscow announced early today, while dispatches said the Red army had seized another strong brideghead on the west bank of the Donets River below Kharkov, useful in the event that Russia launches its own spring offensive.

The midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor said Russian airmen destroyed 370 enemy planes in combat and on airdromes in the week ended Saturday at a cost of 104 aircraft. In the preceding week the Russians announced the destruction of 930 aircraft at a cost of 235 planes.

Ferocious Onslaught

These totals represent better than a 3-to-1 Soviet advantage and illustrate the rising ferocity of the Russian aerial offensive which has smashed key German rear-line bases along the huge front.

In another series of raids Saturday night, Russian bombers attacked Bryansk, Kremenchug and Dnieperptrovsk, a Moscow announcement said.

Thirteen fires and powerful explosions were observed at Bryansk, which links the central and southern fronts. More fires were set amid military trains and in depots at Kremenchug and Dnieperpetrovsk which are on the Dnieper River, 140 and 120 miles, respectively, southwest of Kharkov.

The midnight communique said Russian airmen during Saturday also had destroyed or damaged about 60 German trucks carrying troops and supplies, silenced 10 artillery and five mortar batteries, and sank an enemy transport and one minesweeper.

New Bridgehead Won

Red Star, army newspaper, said the new Soviet toehold on the Donets was established in the Lisichansk district 125 miles southeast of Kharkov. The Red Star also said the Russians captured an important hill and village on the west bank.

In the Caucasus, the midnight bulletin said, two tank-supported German attacks were beaten off northeast of Novorossisk. The Germans lost several hundred men, it was said.

Altogether the Germans lost more than 800 men during yesterday's operations, which included minor engagementes south of Balakleya in the Ukraine, and on the Volkhov front southeast of Leningrad, the communique said.

English Bells Ring

London, May 16 (INS).—Captive Europe today heard the victory peals of church bells rung throughout the British Isles in celebration of the triumphant conclusion of the Tunisian campaign.

The bells of great cathedrals and small parish churches joined in the celebration and the British Broadcasting Company in a special broadcast relayed the peals of the bells at Westminister Abbey, St. Cuthbert's at Edinburgh and St. John's at Cardiff to Europe and to North Africa.

Big Jap Raid Aimed at U.S. Base in China

By International News Service

American Air Force Headquarters in China, May 16.—The biggest raid yet aimed at any American base in China was staged by a large formation of fighter-escorted Japanese bombers today. But the effort cost the enemy at least 15 and probably 25 planes shot down, while the results were negligible.

Target of the attack was the headquarters base of Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault's 14th U. S. Army Air Force, which recently has put long-range Consolidated Liberator bombers into action against Japanese war centers as far away as Hainan Island.

It was clear that the Japanese tried to smash Chennault's headquarters. The attempt was a resounding failure.

The enemy raiders managed to destroy one bomber on the ground and, apart from that, the damage was scarcely worth mention.

Most of the Japanese bombers were unable even to reach the American airdrome because so many P-40 Curtiss Warhawk fighters intercepted and pounced upon the enemy raiding force in time to prevent any concentrated bombing.

Fifteen of the Japanese aircraft were listed as definitely shot down by the Warhawks. Another 10 were recorded as "probables" and many others were damaged, some of them probably failing to return to their bases.

American air formations meanwhile attacked Japanese airdromes in China and destroyed several more enemy planes on the ground.

Va. Strawberries Bring All-Time Record Prices

Salisbury, Md., May 16 (AP).—Eastern Shore strawberries are going to market at all-time record prices as the season opens on the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Prices during the first few days mounted as high as $12 for a crate of 24 quarts at the auction block at Capeville, Va. Prices ranged generally between $7.50 and $10.

Estimates of the yield have recently been revised upward.

The season opened last week with several hundred crates being picked per day, and volume is expected to increase rapidly within the next few days as picking begins throughout the Virginia Shore counties.

Claim Hitler About To 'Ditch' Italy

scant stock of the abdication rumor, adding that the King's prestige was now higher than at any time since the Fascist march on Rome in 1922. It was recalled that Rome radio accounts of the final fighting in Tunisia closed with "long live the King—long live Italy," conspicuously omitting Mussolini's name.

The Daily Mail story declared it "seems fairly certain that Hitler is getting ready to leave Mussolini and his gang in the lurch in the same way that Rommel deserted his Italian colleagues on the desert.

"It is regarded as significant that the Germans have not paid anything more than lip service to their partner since the Axis defeat in Africa. There has been no declaration of continued solidarity as one would have expected,"

On the other hand, the withdrawal might be part of a German plan "to allow Italy to sue for peace to arouse the sympathy of the world" in the hope that "there then might be a real chance for success of a cunning Hitler peace offensive," the Mail added.

The Daily Herald's "Inside Europe" correspondent said Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels had warned Italy that she would have to assume full responsibility for defending her mainland. It termed the article the first of a series of "It's Up to Italy" statements.

Allied Bombs Kill 174 Italians

By William B. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 16.—A lull in the aerial as well as the ground activity has settled upon the Mediterranean and its shores as Allied fliers and soldiers ease up in the interval between the violent Battle of Tunisia and the next phase of the war.

Belatedly, today's communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced a Friday night assault on Palermo, the major supply base in Sicily, by British Wellingtons which dropped showers of incendiaries and explosives and left fires roaring in the docks and in the industrial areas.

This was the biggest action reported in the communique, but Malta's Intruder patrols were active over Sicily and southern Italy, shooting up trains and stations.

One station attacked was near Metaponto, on the shore of the Gulf of Taranto. Allied air forces were continuing to pay considerable attention to this strategic gulf, which forms the instep of the Italian boot.

Hunting Out Supply Craft

The Middle East Air Force also continued its sweeps over the Aegean Islands in search of small Axis schooners and ships supplying the Aegean Islands and forced one small vessel to run ashore.

Otherwise, official reports told only of "normal patrols" by the coastal air forces.

The Italian communique, received here from broadcasts, said however that Trapani in western Sicily had been hit by bombers last night, while Axis planes attacked the Algerian port of Bone. The German communique said several ships were hit in the latter attack—a claim that was not verified in any official Allied announcement.

Palermo, which was the target of the Wellington attack, was badly smashed in a 400-bomber assault by the Americans on May 9 and Friday night's return visit was regarded as an effort to wreck a few remaining objectives.

174 Killed at Civitavecchia

The Berlin radio, meanwhile, reported that Friday's heavy attack by Flying Fortresses on Civitavecchia, 37 miles northwest of Rome, had claimed 174 victims killed and 300 injured.

Although there was no land fighting, the headquarters communique pointed out that the troops were busy with the tremendous job of evacuating prisoners and clearing the Tunisian battlefields.

The battle areas are littered with abandoned enemy equipment which must be gathered up, transported to depots for reconditioning, or carted off to junk heaps. The areas also are filled with Allied ammunition and supply dumps. These are no longer needed there and must be returned to storage.

only 75 per cent of the lesser of last year's or this year's taxes.

In the House, however, Republican leaders laid plans to circumvent just such an occurrence by moving to force a vote there on the full year's abatement principle. A determined Democratic effort is scheduled also to keep the House in line for its own bill, which would cancel only the 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent first bracket surtax on 1942 incomes.

Give Us A Buzz: Not the kind the telephone makes, but the sort you hear when you push a signal button on a Street Car or pull the cord on a Bus. Doesn't sound important? When you look into the matter, IT IS quite important to the operator and to you as a passenger. What we suggest is that you give that buzz in time so your operator can stop where you wish to alight. He prefers to do that; you prefer him to do that and we prefer that he does that.

It happens now and then, however, that a forgetful person does not buzz until his or her stop is so close the operator can't make it. That's bad. And we've noticed too, that sometimes a passenger does buzz once in plenty of time, but the Car or Bus then has to stop before it reaches the unloading point because of a traffic light or a traffic holdup.

When the operator can move again, he may have forgotten that buzz of yours. So buzz a second time. He won't mind; you'll get off at the right spot and everybody will be the happier.

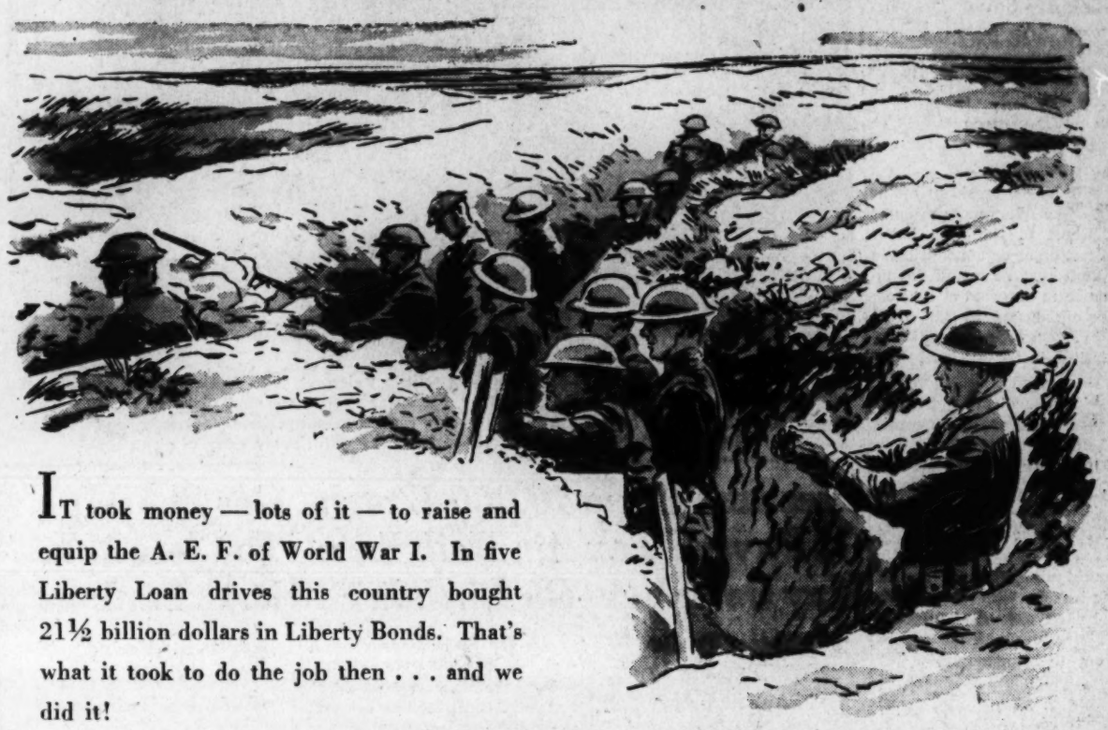
COME ON AMERICA!
...We did it Before in 1918



IT took money — lots of it — to raise and equip the A. E. F. of World War I. In five Liberty Loan drives this country bought 21½ billion dollars in Liberty Bonds. That's what it took to do the job then . . . and we did it!

...And We Will do it Again!

BUT we've got a much bigger fight on our hands this time. A global war! In place of trench warfare, we have armored juggernauts—on land, sea and in the air. And they each cost a small fortune. Contrast the 21½ billion needed for the whole First World War with the 13 billion asked for in one month of this war. You'll see why we've got to keep on buying War Bonds. AND WE WILL!

Deficit Seen Check On Post War Plan

Policy to Cause Cooperation to Fail, Economist Says

Attacking the "new philosophy" of deficit spending to promote prosperity after the war as an obstacle to effective postwar planning, Harold G. Moulton, director of the Brookings Institution, asserted yesterday that neither world economic cooperation nor domestic capital expansion can succeed under that policy.

In a study entitled "The New Philosophy of Public Debt" made by Moulton and financed by the Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh, the author referred to the conflict between "sound public finance" and "unlimited deficit spending" as "the most crucial issue now before the Nation."

The National Resources Planning Board, which recently issued a lengthy prospectus on a postwar program of social security and public employment, was named by Moulton as "the most important Government agency" adhering to the deficit spending theory.

Conflict in Government

"Within the Government itself there is a fundamental conflict of views on the economic significance of the national debt," said Moulton's summary of his conclusions. "Until this is resolved neither the Government nor private enterprise can plan effectively for the postwar era."

The study asserted that "until recently there was general agreement that the rise in public debt eventually should be halted and the trend reversed," and continued:

"Now however, a concept of public finance has taken root in influential quarters which holds that a balanced budget is not only unnecessary but actually undesirable, because it prevents the attainment of full employment; the size of debt is considered to be immaterial so long as it is owned within the Nation.

"In the domestic field, the National Resources Planning Board has outlined a twofold program involving extensive public works and comprehensive social security. Since this board is committed to the theory that national prosperity and income are dependent largely upon the Government's 'contribution to purchasing power.' Through deficit financing, it is deemed unnecessary to give any consideration to the costs."

Monetary Stability Threat

An international currency system tied to a new gold standard such as the Treasury Department has suggested could not be maintained in the absence of financial stability, upon which monetary stability depends according to Moulton's conclusions. He also contends that if the Nation should follow the path of permanent deficit spendnig "disastrous inflation could only be avoided by such widespread regulation and control that it would amount to complete regimentation of economic life."

Long-term capital commitments would be discouraged, it was asserted, by fears of a breakdown of Government credit, inflation and eventual repudiation of Government indebtedness.

Better Conditions

OPA Reveals Plan to Cut Absenteeism

A program for reducing absenteeism by providing such things as nourishing meals at reasonable prices and improving "bad plant conditions" involving poor heating, inadequate locker and other facilities, was outlined yesterday by the Office of War Information.

Based on a survey of 18 war plants in various sections of the country, OWI said the rate of absenteeism was nearly twice as high in plants without systematic plans for reducing the causes.

"Seven plants with systematic programs were found to have a job absence rate averaging 4.4 per cent a month. Nine other war plants, with hit-or-miss methods, had an absence rate of 8.1 per cent."

The survey disclosed that married women are most absent, followed in order by single men, single women and married men. Least absent are old hands with more than two years experience.

Punitive methods, OWI found, do not work well. One shipyard, seeking to shame absent workers, issued "Hitler checks" for lost time. Some workers quit, others brought in evidence that they were ill or had other justifiable reasons for absence, and the company dropped the plan.

Junior War Bond Group Plans Show

The Washington Junior War Bond Savers will stage a floor show at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow at 7 p. m. The group was organized by Carolyne, Charles and Richard Futrovsky, children of Benjamin Futrovsky, 1240 Morse Street Northwest, who have raised more than $10,000 in war bonds.

The children, 6, 8 and 12 years old, were inspired by the Easter youth war bond celebration at the Shoreham, which was organized by Kappa Sigma Tau sorority and contributed $4350 to the children's campaign.

Lewis Won't Attend Today's Coal Meeting

of April. The Government promptly took over the mines, with Secretary of Interior Ickes being placed in charge.

After two days of idleness, and as President Roosevelt prepared to go on the radio with an appeal to the miners to resume work and a promise to the country that "coal will be mined no matter what any individual thinks about it," Lewis held a conference with Secretary Ickes on May 2 and a few hours later announced a 15-day truce. The miners were told to return to their work for that period while negotiations were resumed.

The intervening time has seen the WLB panel continue its deliberations on the coal case, with the operators present but with Lewis and the miners continuing to ignore the agency.

The miners' president in his action yesterday was continuing his long feud with the WLB, a feud in which President Roosevelt has steadily supported the board as the regularly established agency to handle labor disputes. The union chieftain contends the board's adoption of the "Little Steel" formula, limiting wage increases to 15 per cent since January 1, 1941, to compensate for increased living costs, rules out in advance any possibility of the miners getting their wage demands.

Lewis had ignored the War Labor Board requests that he suggest names for the labor member of the three-member panel to weigh the controversy, and yesterday he declared:

"The colossal farce of the mine workers being tried in absentia before a mock court in Washington is a ghastly example of the ineptitude and political maneuvering which have characterized this entire controversy since the conferences began March 10."

He declared that since April 30 "United Mine Workers have had no one with whom they could negotiate. We are still ready to negotiate at any hour, when the bituminous operators show up for a conference. In the light of all facts we think that such a conference would be fruitful."

Then, pausing, he said slowly: "The United Mine Workers will not be represented tomorrow before the War Labor Board."

He declared, "The mine workers have no confidence in the WLB or its works, as appertaining to the questions at issue in the coal industry.

"The War Labor Board has demonstrated the malignity of its purpose to block the making of a wage agreement, to harass the mine workers and to deprive them of the opportunity of securing a wage increase imperatively indicated by every economic and social consideration.

"The whole question of a wage agreement in the mining industry has been tragically mismanaged in a manner foreign to the public interest. The colossal farce of the mine workers being tried in absentia before a mock court in Washington is a ghastly example of the ineptitudes and political maneuverings which have characterized this entire controversy since the conferences began March 10.

"The negotiating committees for the United Mine Workers for the Appalachian areas, North and South, are here in New York awaiting the arrival of someone with whom they can negotiate new agreements for the mining industry.

"We hold ourselves in readiness to go into session on an hour's notice."

Bombing Danger Still Present, O'Conor Warns

Baltimore, May 16 (AP).—Governor O'Conor asserted today there was still danger of enemy bombing attacks on Maryland and said "there is no basis for complacency among our people."

The State's chief executive, addressing commanders of State Minute Men companies meeting in Baltimore, said he based his warning on advices he had received from officials of the War Department.

"Maryland, situated as it is, is in the target area," O'Conor declared. "We must look the facts in the face and understand that the greater the gains of our armed forces, the more desperate will our enemis become."

Yank Troops Battle Japs In Attu Fog

By the Associated Press

American ground troops, apparently denied air and sea support by heavy weather, presumably are battling furiously against the Japanese on rocky Attu in the Aleutions.

The troops warmed up the beaches last Tuesday in the long anticipated drive to force the Japanese out of the Western Hemisphere. Since then the variable weather of the Aleutians, which can lay a blanket of fog so thick that even ground movements are difficult, has closed in, effectively halting aerial aid for the invading troops.

Fight Continuing

But authorities here agree the fight is continuing ashore. Presumably the ground forces are waging battle against enemy units dug into the rocky crevices that abound on Attu.

They agree, too, that "there's nothing yellow about those men and we're sure they're not moving back."

One explanation offered for lack of word on progress of the Aleutians campaign was that with only scant communications facilities ashore on Attu, commanders there may have decided against sending to Washington day-to-day reports of the battle.

The Navy itself forecast such a lack of reports when it announced Friday that the invasion had started, but said details might be unavailable until the campaign ended. Since that meager report only word here has been the statement by Secretary Knox later that same day that the campaign was "progressing satisfactorily."

Island Bases Bombed

Meantime in the South Pacific, American bombing planes are continuing assaults on enemy bases in the Solomons.

One Japanese cargo vessel was blown out of the water off Buin on Bougainville Island in the northern Solomons by a heavy explosion after two direct hits by torpedoes launched from Avenger torpedo planes. The cargo ship was in a concentration of shipping attacked near Buin Thursday, Solomons time.

Earlier that day flying fortresses had bombed the enemy at Kahili and on Ballale Island just off the southern tip of Bougainville. Their attack, the Navy reported, ignited fires at the enemy positions.

Similar attacks upon the same targets in the Buin, Kahili and Ballale Island positions the following day were the American answer to an enemy raid on Guadalcanal's Henderson airfield.

The apparent attempt by the Japanese to slow up the regular bombing of their Solomon Island positions was met by strong opposition from United States fighter planes. The fighters engaged four Japanese bombers over Guadalcanal, the Navy reported. One enemy bomber was shot out of the air, and two others were damaged.

Wrecked Army Plane Yields Bodies of 17

Morganton, N. C., May 16 (AP).—Sheriff R. C. Chapman said today that 17 bodies had been removed from an Army plane wreck near here yesterday, and that an 18th was being sought in the vicinity.

The sheriff said the plane was from Fort Benning, Ga., and had recently been on detached duty at the Maxton, N. C., air base.

The plane ran into a peasoup fog and presumably became lost and crashed into Gingercake Mountain, about 25 miles north of here.

Three Officers Killed In Plane Crash

Roanoke, Va., May 16 (AP).—Army officials were making an investigation today of the plane crash 25 miles north of here yesterday that claimed the lives of three officers.

The dead were listed by Shaw Field, S. C., officials as Flight Surgeon Maj. James P. Citta, 31, of Toms River, N. J.; Maj. Robert M. Bell, 36, of Pittsburgh, head of Shaw Field's dental department, and Group Commander Capt. Jere Asmond Wells, jr., 23, of Atlanta, Ga.

tions went off the air, suggesting new Allied air attacks.

Allied fighter bombers participated in the steady battering of continental railways and blasted other unspecified Axis targets in western Germany, France, Holland and Belgium, while the Mosquitos attacked Berlin—the German capital's second raid in three nights.

Other British planes attacked enemy shipping in European coastal waters.

The air ministry said all of the R. A. F. planes came back safely. It's communique did not specify what damage was created in the attacks on continental objectives.

German planes struck back mildly early yesterday with small raids at several places on the northeast coast of England which the British said caused some damage and casualties.

Observers on the southeast coast of England reported almost continuous air activity over the Channel yesterday for the fifth consecutive day. They said many single planes flew over the Strait of Dover and that one large formdation of fighter-bombers headed toward France.

This indicated that Europe was getting little respite from the terrific non-stop aerial pounding that began Wednesday night when the R.A.F. dumped 1500 tons of blockbusters on the German industrial city of Duisburg.

The German planes which were over the northeast coast of England early this morning, in addition to explosives, dropped leaflets declaring that U-boats were winning the war for Germany. The leaflets said 412 British ships had been sunk by submarines since June, 1941.

The Berlin radio said German planes subjected the shipbuilding center of Sunderland to an hour-long attack and that extensive fires were started by bombs and thousands of incendiaries.

Roosevelt Hints Early Offensive in Asia

London, May 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt in a message to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has expressed hope that in the very near future Allied armies in cooperation with the Chinese would launch an offensive in Asia, Reuters said today in a Chungking dispatch.

The President's message was sent in reply to Chiang's congratulations on the Tunisian victory.

Hoover Warns Anew Against Spies

must, therefore, be on guard."

It was from this school that the eight men who landed from submarines on Long Island and Florida coasts graduated, only to be captured. Six of them were executed after a military tribunal trial. Two others were sentenced to long prison terms.

The FBI never tires of receiving information, inconsequential though it may seem, Hoover emphasized.

Thirty-three spies were sentenced in the Duquesne spy case, he noted, and but for an observing aircraft photographer, the "key" man in the case, Edmund C. (Heinrich) Heine, might have escaped and the case not proven so successful. The aerial photographer, becoming suspicious of an order for 250 air pictures, notified the FBI, they caught "Heinrich," who proved to be Heine, and he was sentenced to 18 years in prison and fined $5000.

To his death, the aged Negro proudly kept a silver-headed cane by his side which President Roosevelt presented to him at the end of his half-hour visit. The cane had both his name and the President's inscribed on it.

Yanks, British Press Home New Aerial Attacks on Burma

By International News Service

New Delhi, May 16.—Successive flocks of American and British planes from bases in India today pressed a mounting "softening up" air offensive that has hit at least nine Japanese-held areas or centers in Burma within the past 24 hours.

The steady aerial sapping of the enemy's strength in this theater suggested the possibility that the Allied air forces might be blasting the way for a counter-invasion of Burma late this summer when the monsoon rains are due to end.

The latest announced series of air blows dealt the foe included a smashing raid yesterday by United States heavy bombers against Lashio, railhead of the Japanese-held Burma Road. A communique issued tonight said bombs were observed exploding on enemy barracks and the vicinity of an electric power station.

ELCO PT SINKS BIG JAP SUB!

From the U. S. Navy comes this wire revealing the latest triumph of its Elco PTs . . . complete annihilation of a large Jap submarine off Guadalcanal.

Ever since the days of Bataan, when Lt. Commander Bulkeley's squadron made headlines that kept our hopes alive, the gallant officers and crews of Elco PTs have been an inspiration to us all. Recently their sensational deeds in the Solomons have been hailed in news dispatches and in the pages of a famous picture magazine.

The vast destruction wrought by Elco PTs against overwhelming odds is shown by the list of their victims. Enemy cruisers, destroyers, transports, an aircraft tender, landing boats, planes, and now a submarine—all have fallen prey to the dazzling speed and lethal sting of these mighty midgets.

The men and women workers of Elco take tremendous pride in the feats of the officers and crews who man the boats they build. This pride is reflected in the amazing rate at which they are turning out the new, faster, harder hitting Elcos . . . affording heroic opportunities to hundreds more young men whose courage and resourcefulness qualify them for thrilling, mile-a-minute PT duty.

Housing Progress

There is a hopeful note in the announcement of the National Housing Agency that by the end of this year housing for approximately 175,000 persons will have been provided in Washington and its suburbs. Even though many of these dwellings remain to be built or completed, that is a very substantial achievement. With the influx of warworkers now diminishing, the acute shortage of living quarters for newcomers should be notably relieved.

It would be foolish to assume, however, that completion of this program will bring solution of Washington's housing problem in sight. Even this large number of persons to be accommodated in war housing projects is only a fraction of the migrants who have flocked here since 1940. The others have been absorbed into boarding houses and spare rooms in private homes. In many instances they have contributed to the disgraceful overcrowding of the city's slums. Where the construction program falls pitifully short of requirements is in its failure to make any provision for permanent residents who become victims of this overcrowding whether or not they are warworkers.

We have previously pointed to estimates by the Washington Housing Association that 20,000 homes have been razed here in recent years to make way for Government buildings and other improvements. New dwellings for less than one-tenth that number of families were provided by the Alley Dwelling Authority. Three of the ADA's projects designed to relieve the shortage of low-rental houses were taken over for warworkers. The result has been to impose acute hardships upon a large number of low-income families. Many of these are warworkers, and their plight is just as much a result of the war as is that of newcomers who cannot find decent living quarters.

We hope it is true, therefore, that the need for large-scale construction of temporary housing is beginning to draw to a close. This should make it possible to center attention on the very urgent need for permanent housing for large families now living in one cramped and filthy room like rabbits in a pen. Congress has already been asked to appropriate five million dollars to be used by the ADA for this purpose. Authorization for such a program has already been voted. Even if Congress approves this appropriation promptly, months will be required to complete the plans, obtain priorities and get the work under way. That makes early action the more urgent, for it is in the overcrowded slums for which virtually no relief has been provided that the greatest menace to the health of the Capital arises.

Wavell In Washington

The sudden collapse of Axis resistance in Tunisia will have the welcome effect of accelerating plans, some of them long formulated but kept on the shelf until now, for carrying the war to the enemy in other theaters of this global conflict. And the presence in Washington at this time of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell and his air force and naval commanders as well as of Generals Stilwell and Chennault suggests the strong possibility that one outcome of the North African victory will be stronger offensive action against the Japanese. Our assault upon Attu is a first step.

This theory is not contradicted but strengthened by the circumstance that during the next four or five months weather conditions make it impossible for the Allies to attempt any invasion of Burma. That country must be reconquered before large-scale aid can reach China. And if an invasion of Burma is to be mounted this year, preparations for such a campaign must be begun now. In this respect the present Churchill-Roosevelt meeting may have the same relation to the Pacific war that the Casablanca parley had to the campaign in Tunisia and the coming Battle of Europe.

In the meantime, however, much can be done in the Pacific without waiting for the end of the monsoon season in Burma. The greatest need in the southwest Pacific and in China, at the moment, is for more Allied air power. Our plane production is now well in excess of 6000 units a month. Hence an increasing number of heavy and medium bombers can now be sent to the Far Eastern sectors for immediate offensive operations against the Japanese as well as to India for the coming campaign in Burma. This action would not prejudice the forthcoming operations against Hitler. We must now throw everything we have into the struggle in both oceans.

With the Mediterranean soon to be completely opened to Allied shipping, thus considerably reducing the distance from America and Britain to India, the problem of supplying our forces there and in China has been made easier. The victory in Tunisia was not merely a defeat for Germany and Italy. It was also a heavy blow to Japan. But that fact can be capitalized only if our offensive strength in the Pacific is increased.

D. C. Black Market

Carried on under cover of darkness, a flourishing black market in potatoes has sprung up in Washington. The Post's reporter, Linton Burkett, not only located a huge truck loaded with Florida potatoes early Saturday morning, but for investigative purposes he agreed to buy 400 pounds for about double OPA ceiling prices. And all this happened on the day when the Food Administration reported that no potatoes were arriving in Washington.

To some people Mr. Burkett's story will suggest that OPA is a hopelessly incompetent enforcement agency. Others will be reminded of the tremendous difficulties of an enforcement task that covers the entire country and includes countless commodities in addition to the meats, poultry, potatoes, etc. that are the cause of greatest concern at present. Although the OPA is planning to make very large additions to its force of field investigators, it can never hope to build up an organization large enough to extirpate black markets, unless the public cooperates with its enforcement efforts by refusing to patronize black markets and by bringing cases of price or rationing violations to official attention. Under the new system of published uniform ceiling prices for controlled goods, there is little excuse for failing to cooperate by pleading ignorance.

The only way to deal effectively with the black market evil is to keep hot on the trail of illegitimate dealers, get the evidence needed to convict them, and see that they are severely punished. Official enforcement efforts must be strategically planned to get at major abuses in various markets and trace them back to their sources, which may originate in the refusal of producers to abide by price regulations. Enforcement efforts, to be effective, also have to be concentrated on a limited number of important commodities that bulk large in the average family budget. It would be a wasteful dissipation of energy to try to track down minor cases of price violations for a multitude of less essential articles that are supposedly subject to control.

When black markets develop in such essential foods as meat and potatoes, the result is not merely to raise basic living costs for black market patrons but to deprive law-abiding individuals of their fair share of essential food products. Another result may be the ruin of law-abiding merchants whose trade is lost to lawbreakers, thugs and racketeers. Even the selfish and lawless minority whose patronage enables black markets to flourish must realize that in the long run they, too, would be losers if racketeers and profiteers were permitted to drive out the legitimate and regular tradesmen upon whom all of us depend for most of the things we buy.

Prisoners

One might almost say that the kind of treatment accorded prisoners of war is a test of how far a nation has progressed along the road of civilization. The savage heaps indignities upon a conquered foe. The really civilized man treats him considerately, even though such treatment may entail sacrifice on his own part. And we shall soon have to make sacrifices in order to accommodate our share of the thousands of prisoners who have been captured in Africa. It will take a lot of food to feed a captive army composed of husky men in the prime of life. Whether we supply that food directly or not, the demand will indirectly increase the demands upon our own food stores. Fortunately, it is said, they will give work in return.

There is a certain irony in discussing ways and means of using captive Germans and Italians to relieve our labor shortage, by the way, while we hold in "relocation" centers (concentration camps) loyal American citizens and law-abiding aliens of Japanese origin. Surely if we can find work for former enemy soldiers, we cannot plead inability to find safe and useful occupations for thousands of our own citizens who have been forced to abandon their homes and their jobs to live in semi-idleness in relocation centers that are little better than prison camps.

Political Labels

It was perhaps not gracious of Prof. Frederick L. Schuman of the FCC to issue that public attack on the Dies Committee and the Kerr subcommittee. The subcommittee had in effect just exonerated the professor of the suspicion of "un-American activities," while the full committee has recommended the dismissal of Mr. Goodwin B. Watson and Mr. William E. Dodd, jr., also of the FCC, and Mr. Robert Morss Lovett, secretary for the Virgin Islands. Professor Schuman in his statement came warmly to the defense of his colleagues and even accused the Dies Committee itself of having "un-American tendencies." Indignant at such crass ingratitude, the committee promptly ordered the report in the Schuman case stricken from the record, and referred the whole business back to the subcommittee, which looks like a pointed suggestion that the professor, too, be fired forthwith.

This scarcely has the appearance of objective justice, an impartial consideration of the question at issue. But evidently the committee considers that any criticism of itself, or of its methods and findings, is ipso facto "un-American" and "subversive" and, therefore, quite sufficient to damn anybody.

In the defense of Messrs. Watson and Dodd Professor Schuman challenges the right of Congress to demand the dismissal of public officials and asks for a statutory definition of "subversive activity" whereby the Federal courts as well as congressional investigating committees may be guided. "If Congress is unable or unwilling to face the problem frankly," he says, "it should neither expect nor permit its ad hoc committees to sit in judgment on officials charged with crimes nowhere defined by law."

Here, it seems to us, the professor is on sound ground. A little more definition of all the political labels and catchwords now being thrown about so recklessly not only here in Washington but over the ether waves of the world would be very helpful at this point. For that matter some of Professor Schuman's own terms and labels could stand definition, too. Especially in need of definition is the word "Americanism." In a situation where each side is accusing the other of "un-Americanism" how can any of us tell where the truth lies until we have some notion what the word really means—if anything?

Labor Statesmanship

The reasonable and responsible labor leaders of the country have been the prime victims of John L. Lewis' conduct in the coal dispute. They, and the members of their unions, will suffer if Congress should go beyond the Connally bill and pass unnecessarily restrictive legislation because of its anger against Lewis. And any success that the United Mine Workers chief may seem to gain through his rough-and-tumble tactics will make it more difficult for the other leaders to impose restraints upon their followers.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the executive board of the C. I. O., meeting in Cleveland last week, denounced John Lewis in terms quite as vigorous as any that might have been applied to him by an employers' association. This body, over which he once presided, accused Lewis of jeopardizing the just demands of his union "by exploiting the injustices in the mining industry in furtherance of his personal vendetta against the President of the United States, our Commander in Chief." The indictment does not seem too strong. Coming from men whose allegiance to labor interests cannot be questioned, it may have a healthy effect upon the restless rank and file.

But condemnation of Lewis by men who are essentially his rivals can only boomerang against them if he should be successful in his defiance of the Government. "In times of emotional stress," declared the C. I. O. board, "the labor movement of this country must be particularly wary of any person or element which seeks to substitute for sane and democratic processes willful and revengeful dictation. Labor's rights must be protected, vigorously protected, but they must be protected within the framework of rational procedure."

Here is a satisfactory working definition of the essential distinction between statesmanship and demagoguery in the sphere of labor relations. Members of the C. I. O. can be expected to support the principle laid down by their leaders, however, only if they are convinced that their interests will not suffer because of it. Whatever benefits the United Mine Workers may receive in the negotiations with their employers to be resumed today, it is of the utmost importance that they receive them through the established machinery of the War Labor Board. John Lewis has chosen to make a fresh attack on the WLB. But no matter how much Lewis rants about it, the authority of the board must be upheld. If he can figure out a way of saving face, well and good. But what matters a great deal more is that his face-saving must not involve loss of face for the men who have shown a greater sense of responsibility or for the Government itself.

WINGED MARINER

The seagull's narrow sails of feather lift
Across the boundaries of the hemispheres;
Effortlessly, tirelessly they drift
Along the ocean crest, the stars' frontiers,
Coasting the cloud, riding the winds of space,
Winnowing the fog, each element their home—
Motion made music whose slow measured grace
Beats to the long sonatas of the foam.

When the cold norther blows the ruddy west
To ashen gray and seabirds landward flee,
Then watch the gull emerge and casually brave
That steep descent from heaven to the sea,
Furling his wings at last to rock and rest
In the green hollow of the stormy wave.

Military Decisions

By Mark Sullivan

Criticism Taboo

THE COMMON assumption in Washington is that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and their respective staffs are deciding the next move against the Axis; and, following that, laying down the pattern of future moves. About the decisions, one thing is sure. They are for the high commands alone to make. The public cannot have information about them, because such information would be valuable to the enemy. Because the public cannot have information, it cannot have judgment. This is illustrated by something that went on throughout most of last year.

Beginning early last year there was popular clamor for a second front in Europe—that is, an invasion of the European continent and an attack upon Germany by a British and American force. The clamor continued in England and America throughout the summer. While some of it was inspired by Communists, a great deal was spontaneous and reflected a genuine popular wish. Toward this popular demand the attitude of the British and American Governments was one of diplomatic stalling. They knew that a second front in Europe in sufficient force to be at once formidable and safe was impossible. But to say that would have been to give valuable information to Hitler. Moreover, continuance of the demand for a second front provided the British and American Governments with camouflage for what they were really about to do. Beginning about June the British and Americans knew they would undertake to occupy North Africa. That was as much as they were able to do under the conditions existing last year.

What last year's conditions were became known to the public a few weeks ago. By a report of the Truman Committee of the Senate, followed by statements from Secretary of the Navy Knox, it became known that throughout last year enemy submarines were sinking a larger tonnage of Allied ships than the number of new ships being built. The excess of destruction by the enemy was such that at the end of 1942 the Allies had about a million tons less shipping than they had had at the beginning. In that condition of diminishing tonnage, a second front in Europe was impossible. This the Allied high command knew. The public did not.

ANOTHER experience of last year is useful to apply now. When American General Eisenhower set out to occupy French North Africa, he expected that the territory would be delivered to him by a French General named Giraud. For this purpose, General Giraud was sent secretly to North Africa, by submarine. It turned out, however, that the French army in North Africa would not take orders from General Giraud.

To General Eisenhower this was extremely embarrassing. It looked as if he might have to fight and conquer the French army in North Africa before he could even begin to fight the Axis. Actually, there was some fighting between the American and French armies, with material loss of life.

It happened, however, that there was in North Africa a representative of the Vichy French government, Admiral Darlan. Darlan offered to order the French army to cease firing on the Americans and further to join the Americans in fighting the Axis. General Eisenhower accepted the offer, of course.

This decision of General Eisenhower ended the fighting between the Americans and French, saved many French and Americans lives, and hastened our occupation of North Africa, according to an estimate made by President Roosevelt at the time, by "a month or two."

NEVERTHELESS, as soon as General Eisenhower's arrangement with Darlan became known in America, there was an outcry here, chiefly from liberals and radicals. Their outcry was mainly, that American military authorities ought not to enter into any agreement with any official of the Vichy French government—no matter how valuable the arrangement was in a military sense. Those who took this view kept up for many months a din of criticism against President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of State Hull.

This Eisenhower-Darlan incident is here told very briefly. It had many ramifications. For some of the opposition to the arrangement, there were appealing reasons.

But the fundamental lesson is plain. Military decisions should be left to military men. When a military high command, or a military leader in the field, has made a decision for a military purpose, for the purpose of bringing the war to an end in the shortest possible time with the least loss of life—when such a decision has been made by a military commander, he should be free from criticism from those who may deplore the decision on grounds of ideology. This lesson is the more important to remember because, when and as we invade Europe, scores of situations will arise similar to the Eisenhower-Darlan one in North Africa.

New Naval Warfare

By Paul Schubert

Evolution Of Sea Combat

IN A RECENT article in the Saturday Evening Post, Captain Gatch of the Navy revealed a remarkable fact. Speaking about battleship "X," which he commanded in action in the Pacific theater, the captain told of opening fire on enemy ships with 16-inch turret guns, at night, and hitting the target on the first salvo at 16,000 yards—8 nautical miles.

It isn't long since shooting as good as this would have been considered remarkable in broad daylight. It isn't long since night action was considered a hair-raising gamble, fought only at the short ranges at which searchlights or star shells could illuminate the target—2 or 3 miles at the outside. Battleship "X's" performance, splendid as it is, is no longer unique. It has been matched by the shooting of other battleships and cruisers of our Navy. The gun is back in the running as one of naval warfare's killing weapons, doubly valuable under conditions when aircraft can't join action—night, fog or heavy weather.

Thus the evolution of modern naval battle completes a cycle. When the present war began, naval battle was still battle of the gun—a fumbling, running, long-range affair in which it was very hard to get decisive results. The Graf Spee episode was typical. In that 1939 gun fight, only one airplane took part, launched from a British cruiser to "spot" gunfire; the only torpedoes fired were shot from ships at ranges too great to be effectual. The Graf Spee was not destroyed in combat—the fact that her people "quit" and blew her up was partly due to battle damage the ship had suffered, and partly to a quirk of the Hitler mentality.

THE NEXT phase of naval warfare saw the emergence of the torpedo plane. The bombing plane had been a disappointment, at least insofar as the effectiveness of high-level heavy bombing was concerned. The torpedo-plane hit with a much harder sock—but at first the torpedo-plane was not used to sink ships so much as to cripple them. The finishing punch was still reserved for the gun. The torpedo-plane appeared in the Taranto raid; it was then used at sea in the Cape Matapan battle, and after that with spectacular results in the pursuit of the Bismarck. Torpedoes dropped from aircraft cut the Bismarck's speed to a slow crawl which made it possible for British battleships to overtake the big German and batter her to helplessness with gunfire; the coup de grace was finally dealt by torpedoes fired from British cruisers.

With the entry of Japan and the United States into the war, the torpedo-plane took the center of the stage as the killing weapon of modern sea combat, and the gun was thrust rudely into second place. Both the Japanese and ourselves believed in the wallop of massed, concentrated torpedo-planes used in numbers much larger than British, Germans or Italians had ever employed.

The torpedo-plane was the weapon with which Japan struck at Pearl Harbor, and a short time later knocked out the Repulse and Prince of Wales. Dive-bombers and some level-bombers were used to divert antiaircraft gunfire, but the killing punch came from torpedoes.

We replied with deadly torpedo planes in the Coral Sea and Midway battles. At about that time it looked as if the day of the gun was gone never to return—many observers believed fleets would no longer come within gun-range, but would fight exclusively at aircraft-range.

THE torpedo-plane and its dive-bomber companion attack began also to play a part in sea warfare, when delivered from land bases such as Henderson Field on Guadalcanal. And the land-based air attack which had never managed to do much to control ship movements when using high-level heavy bombing, developed "skip" bombing as a more effective method.

These various forms of air attack, both ship-based and shore-based, remain fundamental ingredients of the new naval warfare. Now the gun-fighting ship, returning to the wars in a new form with high speed, greater protection than is possible in anything else that floats, and hitting with the accuracy and impact of a new kind of gunnery, reappears as the other main element of the sea power combination.

Thus naval warfare evolves into its "modern" form.

Modern sea power has two punches: (1) the gun-projectile, and (2) the torpedo (with its variant, the "skip" bomb).

Modern guns are deadly, killing weapons, and in all conditions in which a naval gun-platform (a ship) can be brought within gun-range of the enemy, guns are great winners of battles. Modern torpedoes are equally deadly. For attacks beyond gun-range, torpedo-planes supported by dive-bombers have won a place equal to that of the gun—and the land-based skip-bomber is "arriving."

Fortunately, our Navy wields both punches superbly, and Army skip-bombers play a splendid supporting role.

Willow Run

May I speak for a group of interested citizens of Washtenaw County and tell you how much we appreciate the skill with which Mrs. Meyer handled the Willow Run story. We are certain that her article contributed to the loosening and the eventual break-up of the Federal inertia regarding this area.

As we refer, from time to time, to the articles, we are amazed at their accuracy and directness in setting the problem before the public. We have all been particularly impressed because we remember how many facts, figures and impressions were thrown at Mrs. Meyer in the short period of time that she was here.

We now have promises of safe drinking water, surface drainage, and some type of garbage disposal for the Willow Run area. When these promises are fulfilled I hope to be the first to invite Mrs. Meyer back for another visit. The Beyer Hospital is now under construction. This, you may recall, is the 90-bed addition so urgently needed in Ypsilanti. Although this will not solve, it will help lessen the hospital problem. F. P. H. A. is attempting to secure additional hospital facilities for their people in the "Townsite." I could go on and write a book about things that have happened since she left. The sanitation facilities and the construction of the Beyer Hospital are symptoms, or might I better say signs, of improvement in a pretty sick patient.

We recognize, of course, that symptoms are not enough. They do, however, make us feel a little better. May we thank you for the help Mrs. Meyer's articles gave us.

Easter Editorial

Your Easter editorial, "From the Dead," pleased me so much that I took the liberty of making it the subject of my column in last week's Panolian, the little paper (small in size only) published at Batesville, Miss., and on which, way back in the first years of the 1890's, I learned to set type, gather news, write pieces, a little poor quality editing, and for which I have written a column nearly every week since.

I have been one of your readers off and on for more than 40 years, and your editorial page becomes more brilliant with each passing year. JAMES S. McCARTHY.

'All Clear'

I, too, would like to voice my objections to the new air raid warnings, with particular reference to the "all clear."

Along with the fact that many may not be near a radio at the time of a raid, consideration should be given to the fact that an individual (perhaps with German sympathies) could, in person, make a general "all clear" announcement to a group which had no access to a radio, which announcement could result in far-reaching devastation. One light turned on by an unthinking individual (or an enemy agent) could start the proverbial "ball" rolling and mob instincts would take care of the rest.

Also, the frequencies of all Washington radio stations are well known. Would it not be possible for an enemy agent to superimpose an "all clear" at a critical moment during an air raid?

Let's have a definite "all clear" sounded by the same authorities who sound the blue and red.

Roll Back of Prices

Recent actions of the OPA and of its director, Mr. Brown, suggest that there is little hope for an end to rising living costs without the complete revision of OPA leadership and OPA policies. The new meat ceilings are a case in point. Less than two weeks after Mr. Brown eloquently promised a major "Roll Back" in prices, the OPA ordered (technically, it "permitted"—it means the same) increases up to 20 cents a pound in the price of meat for most Washington consumers. If this is the sort of "Roll Back" Mr. Brown had in mind, let's get an OPA director who at least knows a price rise when he sees one.

Sincerely,
R. OXFORD.

Postwar Individualism

The blood-sweat-and-tears being shed by the American people today to preserve the rights and opportunities of the individual will be followed by the economic means to further promote individual independence and responsibilities in the postwar period.

I believe the resurgence of responsible individualism, as compared with the movement of collectivism that has swept through the world in recent years, will be one of the greatest gains that will come out of this war for our people. And it is bound to affect all postwar planning by Government and business. B. B. GEYER.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Harry Hopkins And The Victory Garden

Harry Hopkins has planted a Victory Garden and the newspapers and newsreels are carrying pictures of Harry looking down on the plot as if a little worried that the vegetables might come up without any Government assistance.

Harry's whole expression as he stands there looking down on his garden plot seems to say, "I know those little seeds used to come through in the old days, but this is a new era. They'll have to get help."

We can imagine Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins out there planting. "Do you think the ground has been plowed enough, Harry?" asks Mrs. Hopkins.

"I suppose the Republicans would claim it's soft enough, but I have my doubts," replies Harry.

"What about putting in soybeans?" Mrs. Hopkins asks.

"I don't care much for soybeans," Harry admits. "They're too closely associated with industrialism. You can do wonderful things with a soybean without any party backing. It's too reminiscent of the old order.

"How about some lettuce?"

"Lettuce prospers pretty freely without much help, too."

"What do you think of setting out some cabbage heads?"

"Don't ask me for an opinion on cabbage heads now. Wait until I see the Republican slate."

"Do you like peas?"

"I don't know what our party would do without 'em. Look at all the peas we depend on . . . WPB . . . OPA . . . FPC . . . PWA . . . everything like that."

"I suppose we'd better plant some string beans."

"Yes. If only on account of the President's hold the string order."

"He said hold the line, not the string."

"Oh, yes! My mistake."

"Do you want to set out some potatoes, dear?"

"They're dangerous. Suppose they came up successfully and it got around that I had plenty of potatoes. It would embarrass the Administration."

"Do you like radishes and cucumbers?"

"No, but let's raise some. We can always serve 'em to any dinner guests we know are for Willkie."

Well, anyhow, the garden gets planted and then Mr. Hopkins calls some secretaries and says, "Take some letters about this garden."

"You don't need letters to get a garden to grow," says Mrs. Hopkins.

"Nonsense," insists Harry, "This has got to follow the regular channels . . . There must be a statement on preplanting and postplanting plans . . . There must be definite objectives . . . and the usual blueprints."

Ultimately, about to leave the garden site, he remarks, chidingly, "You forgot to leave plenty of space in the center for chairs."

"Chairs for what?" asks Mrs. Hopkins.

"Conferences," comes the answer.

Famous Last Lines

To Mussolini: Have you ever been to Africa, Benito?

To Hitler: I hear desert fighting is very interesting, Adolf.

People are urged not to go far on a vacation this summer. Something midway between the A and B coupons, as it were.

Vacationers are also asked to scatter vacations and not take them all in July and August. We are taking ours at once. By July and August they may be rationing flyswatters, punk, sunburn oil and snakebite cures.

Gasoline for lawn mowers is taboo. We will have to get back to the old-fashioned method of cutting a lawn thoroughly and leisurely.

'Dangerous Rumors'

I want to congratulate you on the article in yesterday's paper, titled "Dangerous Rumors." Yes, I heard the dangerous rumors, although I paid no attention to them, because I have heard such rumors as this before. The better type of persons of both races will keep their feet on the ground and will work this problem out to a very happy solution.

I know what it means to pay heed to dangerous rumors. Let's all stick to facts and leave fancies alone.
ARTHUR CLARENDON SMITH.
Washington, May 13.

You are to be highly commended for the enlightened attitude you displayed in your editorial of May 12 regarding the dangerous rumors of race riot in the past few weeks. People who pass along rumors without trying to get at the source unquestionably do the work of the Axis — whether consciously or through ignorance. These rumors must have pleased Hitler a great deal.

Let the theory of racial supremacy go with Hitler to the grave that waits for him just beyond the Western Front. Let all patriotic Washingtonians recognize the obvious right of Negro citizens to participate to the full in any industry in the Nation's Capital.

Far East Offensive

By Ernest K. Lindley

Burma Campaign Problems

A DECISION to invade Burma this fall involves complex and possibly troublesome questions of politics and command. Burma was a British possession. It is important in the war as a supply route to China. But a campaign to reconquer Burma must be launched from India, and the top Allied commander in India is naturally a Britisher, Marshal Wavell.

LINDLEY

The relations between Chungking and the British authorities in India are by no means felicitous. The Chiang Kai-sheks have been openly sympathetic to the Indian nationalist movement. In that part of the world, Britain symbolizes imperialism, and not always a very enlightened form of imperialism. The admirable qualities and ideals which the western peoples know in Britain and the Commonwealth are not so readily apparent to the peoples whose direct contacts have been confined to the imperial realms in the Far East where the Oriental has been treated often as an inferior person if not as a subject.

In China, American collaboration and leadership are trusted more than British. A strong independent China has been a long-standing American policy. American missionaries in China and Chinese students in the United States have established emotional and cultural ties between the two countries. And American policy in the Philippines testified that our purposes in the Far East were not imperial.

WHEN BURMA was threatened by the Japanese, the Chinese offered to send troops to aid in its defense. This offer was rejected. Whatever the other reasons may have been, the rejection was interpreted in many quarters as meaning that the British did not want the Chinese to establish any form of claim to Burma. Superficially, it appeared that the British would rather let Japan take Burma than cloud their title to its recovery after Japan had been defeated. Later, however, the rejection of the Chinese offer was reversed. Chinese troops went into Burma under the command of Lieut. Gen. Stilwell. And some of them escaped with him into India.

These Chinese troops have been equipped with lend-lease American equipment, which was on its way to China when Burma was lost. They have been augmented by Chinese soldiers flown out of China. So that now General Stilwell has in India the nucleus of a new, modern, well trained Chinese army. Some small units of these troops have seen action recently along the India-Burmese border and are reported to have acquitted themselves well.

The exact size of the Chinese corps in India has not been officially disclosed, but it is relatively small: too small to undertake alone the reconquest of Burma even with ample air and naval support.

In numbers the Indian army is imposing. But much of it presumably is not yet well equipped and well trained. And the performance of the units engaged in the limited offensive in Arakan during the last several months is considered disappointing. The purpose of this expedition has not been officially disclosed. It may have served invaluably in diverting Japanese strength from a drive from upper Burma into Yunnan, and so saved the American air transport terminal at Kunming. But it failed to reach its objective and has been thrown back.

IN A CAMPAIGN for the reconquest of Burma, it may be possible to use effectively some Chinese troops in China. But this would require careful coordination and agreement on a command satisfactory to the Chinese generals involved. The decentralization of authority in the Chinese army is considered a serious handicap to the organization of coordinated offensives. Although on the average they are poorly equipped, the Chinese armies are believed to have enough equipment for offensive actions now if it could be properly grouped. As a rule, however, Chinese commanders are said to regard their equipment and troops as more or less their personal property, so that it becomes very difficult to take equipment and troops away from one army and assign them to another.

Among the Allied commanders, only Generals Stilwell and Chennault have intimate knowledge of the Chinese, and their confidence. If the Chinese are to have an important part in it, General Stilwell would appear to be the local commander in chief of a campaign in Burma. But the British might well fear that the assignment of this command to an American would further impair their prestige in an area of the world where, from an imperial viewpoint, it needs restoration.

These political complications—which have been indicated here only in barest outline and without the qualifications and refinements which would be needed to satisfy experts—may seem wholly secondary to the question: whether a Burma campaign can be undertaken this fall. No matter under whose auspices, the expedition, if it is to have reasonable assurance of success, must be on a considerable scale, with strong naval protection and air cover and support. Under any circumstances, landing barges and other special equipment would have to be brought to India. But the most efficient use of the troops and equipment already available—including the Chinese forces in India and within China—would reduce the strength that would have to be diverted from other fronts. So, as in many other phases of the war, political and military problems are tangled up together.

'American' War Spirit

Wallace Hails Latins

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Vice President Wallace told a Central Park "I Am An American Day" rally today that in every country he visited on his recent Latin American tour there were "millions of Americans at work in the service of the common cause."

Wallace expressed hope in his prepared address that citizens of the United States would not forget "that we possess no monopoly on the name, 'American,'" and added that the Spanish-speaking Americans of the countries he visited—Costa Rica, Panama, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia—"are just as patriotic citizens of the New World as any of us who speak English."

Great Crowd Listens

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine estimated the crowd that heard the Vice President speak at 1,100,000 persons, among them many men and women in uniform.

Several persons suffered minor injuries in the jostling, a number fainted and one policeman suffered a heart attack.

Among those who participated in the program were Capt. Joseph J. Foss, Marine flier from Sioux Falls, S. Dak., who is credited with downing 26 Japanese planes, and Maj. Raymond Massey, former stage star, now in the Canadian army.

The Vice President said that nowhere in his trip did he find greater pride in democracy than in Chile which he described as a Catholic country that also contains a higher percentage of Communists than almost any other country except Russia.

In Chile, he said, the Radical Party, distinct from the Communist Party, was in power and there are also Socialists, Liberals and Conservatives.

"Personally I believe in the two-party system," he said, "but who can deny that in Chile they have a genuine democracy, which gives every shade of opinion a chance to express itself?"

Miners in Chile have worked without sparing themselves to produce war-essential copper, Wallace continued, and he expressed hope that when peace came Americans in the United States would not forget them.

"I think of the Bolivian tin miners working in some of the highest mines in the world, 14,000 feet above the sea," he said. "Their wages are pitiably low according to standards in this country. I think of the Bolivian Indians toiling on their farms. By comparison with them the miners are well off.

Bespeaks Aid for Indians

"I say the Bolivian tin miners and the Bolivian farmers, even though they may be of Indian blood and may speak only Quechua or Aymara, are Americans; that they are doing their part to win the war, and that we should not forget them when peace comes."

He told of men in Ecuador working cheerfully under disagreeable conditions to get balsa wood used in the construction of mosquito bombers, and of the men gathering rubber and quinine bark in the jungles of Peru, Colombia, Bolivia, Costa Rica and Panama.

"Some of them are working in places where the contraction of malaria is almost a certainty and the probability of death within two years is almost fifty-fifty," Wallace declared.

When the war is over, he said, a new opportunity will open before the Western Hemisphere, when "our ideals of democracy and peace and tolerance and good neighborliness can be an example, an inspiration to the people overseas."

Trade Pacts Assailed

O'Mahoney Asks Veto Provision

By the Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, said yesterday Congress must assume veto powers over the reciprocal trade program if it expects to participate in postwar reorganization. He served notice he will seek to force submission of agreements to oCngress.

"It is idle to pretend that the elected representatives of the American people will be permitted any voice in postwar economic reorganization if at the very threshold of postwar reorganization we surrender the power by extending the unlimited trade agreements act," O'Mahoney declared.

Legislation renewing the reciprocal trade authority was passed last week by the House, which rejected 170 to 149 a proposal enabling Congress to reject any agreement within 90 days after its negotiation by the Administration.

Hull First Witness

The Senate Finance Committee takes up the legislation today, with Secretary Hull the first scheduled witness. Hull is demanding that the program be extended without lessening the President's authority to negotiate tariff-reducing agreements with other nations in return for reciprocal concessions.

O'Mahoney said his proposed amendment would prohibit any trade agreement from becoming effective until it had been approved by Congress "in the same manner and form" by which legislation approval is required in the country with which the agreement is made. He said that all 30-odd agreements now in effect except four, have become operative without action by foreign legislative bodies. These four agreements are with Belgium, Cuba, Ecuador and Peru, he said.

"In view of the argument made in the House that the trade agreement authority should not be changed a jot or tittlt because of the critical international situation," he said, "I am going to offer this amendment to test the sentiment of Congress.

O'Mahoney Warning

"If Congress is content in this great crisis to renew the trade agreement authority without requiring submission of specific agreements to the people's representatives before they become effective, it will have taken the first step toward eliminating itself from participation in postwar reorganization."

The Wyoming Senator noted that the United States now has no trade agreements with Russia and China, but Congress is being asked to say that the Executive may enter into secret trade negotiations with Russia and China from which Congress will be utterly and completely excluded.

"Congress three times in the last ten years has meekly surrendered its constitutional power to pass on trade agreements," he asserted.

"Now we are being asked for the fourth time to make the same gesture of self abnegation while we go through the form of pretending that we still adhere to the fundamentals of popular government."

O'Mahoney expressed confidence his proposal will receive bipartisan support.

High British, U. S. Officers Visit At Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., May 16 (AP).—Top-ranking members of the United States and British high commands, including Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British imperial staff, were guests in the colonial atmosphere of restored Williamsburg over the weekend.

The party arrived by motor from Langley Field Saturday. They were greeted by Mayor Channing Hall of Williamsburg, President John E. Pomfret of the College of William and Mary, and Kenneth Chorley of the Williamsburg Restoration. Today the visitors attended services at Old Bruton Parish Church.

Other members of the party were Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief of British forces in India; Sir Charles Portal, chief of the British air staff; Lieut. Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, chief staff officer for the Prime Minister; Admiral Sir James Somerville, commander in chief of the British eastern fleet based on Ceylon; Air Chief Marshal Sir Richard Peirse, air officer commanding in India; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, first British sea lord.

Randles School To House SPARS

Men yesterday vacated Randles Preparatory School, 1923 N Street Northwest, for the first time in 11 years to allow renovations to be started in anticipation of its being taken over by a strictly feminine contingent, 175 SPARS.

The residence, which will be conducted under Navy discipline, will house enlisted personnel and should be ready for occupancy in a week or 10 days, it was said yesterday.

village of Hot Springs, including a railway station, a bank, a postoffice, three churches, several garages and numerous beauty shops.

The nearest factory is 20 miles away.

In this mountain domain, described in the hotel literature as "more like a feudal barony, perhaps, than a commercial property of the twentieth century," the warring world could seem far away. But the presence of steel-helmeted soldiers is a reminder of the military task which must be finished before the postwar world can be built.

The seclusion and quiet in which the conference will work are accentuated by the hotel's self-sufficiency. It has its own fields and pastures and greenhouses, its own dairy, its own poultry farm, truck gardens, even a private airport.

For the relaxation of the delegates it has 100 miles of bridle trails and scenic paths, swimming pools, tennis courts, golf courses and a private theater. There is no bar, but a club is open to the delegates. Luxury shops line the hotel corridors.

The keynote of Hot Springs, however, is the rocking chair. Hundreds of them line the broad verandas of the hotel, or creak on the porches of the nearby boarding houses. They symbolize the leisurely and somewhat old-fashioned atmosphere of the place.

May Temperatures This Year Average 9 Degrees Under '42

Interested in weather statistics?

The Weather Bureau stated last night that the average May temperature thus far this year is 9 degrees lower than that of 1942. May 6 and 8, this year, are currently wearing this month's title of maximum, both tying with 89 degrees, while 37 degrees on the 2d take the "booby" prize. Last year's high and low registered at 94 and 50 degrees.

First place for all-time maximum for May 1 to 15 came in 1899, when 96 degrees was recorded, curiously enough, on May 1. The all-time minimum came in 1906, when May 11 shivered a cool 33 degrees.

40,000 See Fliers Perform on Air Mail Anniversary

by Col. F. H. Gregory, attached to the technical staff of the engineering division, material command, of the Army Air Force at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Apparently there's nothing the ship can't do. It rises vertically, goes sideways, backward, or ahead. It stays suspended in the air. It descends as vertically as it rises. It is a marvelous piece of engineering.

Igor Sikorsky termed the contrivance a rotary wing aircraft and described it as opening new vistas in aviation.

The helicopter's introduction to Washington was convincing. It landed at 9:30 a.m. on the east lawn of the Capitol and from a delegation selected Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat) Virginia, to go for a three-block ride.

Al Williams, one of the old line and most famous stunt fliers, hauled out an eight-year-old Grumman biplane and gave a beautiful exhibition of stunt flying. He flew upsidedown within 50 feet of the ground at 200 miles an hour; he looped, belly-rolled and dived.

A commemorative event was the arrival of a Pitcairn Mail Wing, described from the speakers' platform as an exact duplicate of the one flown on the first foreign air-mail service flight between Montreal and New York in 1928.

The original trip was made by a plane owned by Colonial Airlines, one of whose pilots, Capt. Herb Clark, flew the plane here today. He brought along with him a letter addressed to President Roosevelt from Canadian Premier W. L. MacKenzie King.

Postmaster General Frank Walker and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones were on hand to welcome the ship. Both afterward spoke to the crowd on the importance of the occasion.

Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, pioneer Transatlantic aviators, were there, as was Col. Roscoe Turner, the Nation's No. 1 speed flier. There was Capt. Chuck O'Connor, veteran pilot for the American Airways, now with the Air Transport Command, who possibly has flown an airplane in commercial transport as far as any man.

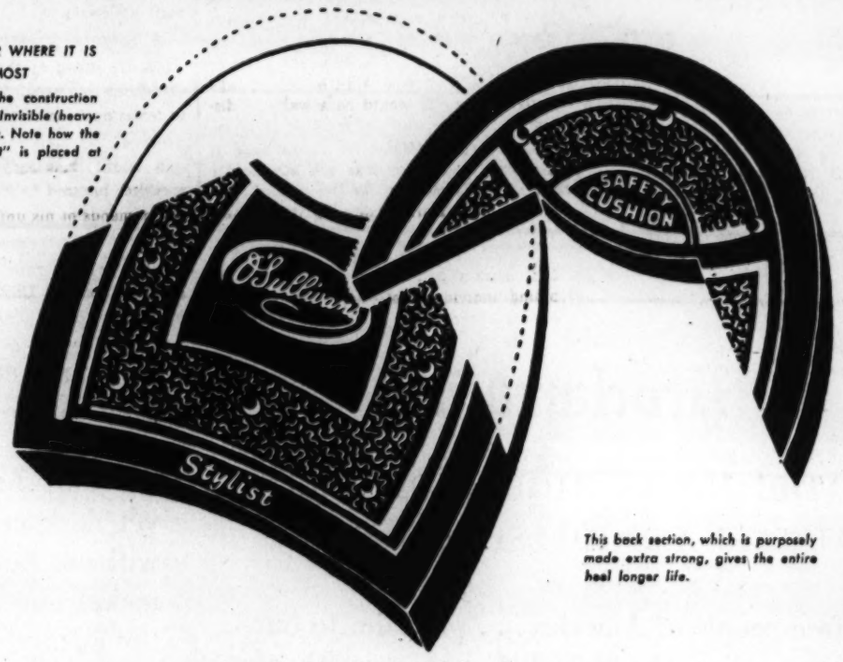
Necessity is the Mother of — an Outstanding Rubber Heel

PUTTING THE WEAR WHERE IT IS NEEDED MOST

This sketch shows the construction of O'Sullivan's new "Invisible (heavy-duty) Segment" idea. Note how the "heavy-duty segment" is placed at point of wear.



This back section, which is purposely made extra strong, gives the entire heel longer life.

The need to find some essential use of thousands and thousands of tons of scrap rubber has led to the invention of a new and outstanding type of rubber heel.

The President's Scrap Drive yielded over four hundred and fifty thousand tons of scrap rubber. Of this amount a considerable portion cannot be used for tires, life rafts or many other essential products.

However, there IS one essential item that these thousands of tons can now be used for.

Through a new process of manufacturing, The O'Sullivan Rubber Company has discovered a method of making good-looking, comfortable and long wearing rubber heels from this idle scrap rubber.

Since the back portion of the heel gets the most wear, this new type of heel with a heavy-duty back, wears down more evenly over the entire surface.

Shortage of leather and the tremendous need for shoe repairing, created by shoe rationing, have placed rubber heels in the category of "absolutely essential."

O'Sullivan's new process, which has been made available to every other manufacturer of rubber heels, gives America a new type of rubber heel with these distinct advantages:

1. Good-looking and comfortable rubber heels — with the advantage of extra strength in the portion of the heel that gets the most wear.
2. This new type of construction reduces skidding and slipping.
3. These heels can be made from thousands and thousands of tons of scrap rubber which so far can be used for very few other—and certainly no more essential—purposes.

THE CONSCIENCE OF AMERICA INSISTS:

To those of my people who fight for the right to die with their boots on—my pride, my love, my devotion...

Arthur Szyk

New York, Dec. 1942.

A Proclamation

ON THE MORAL RIGHTS OF THE STATELESS AND PALESTINIAN JEWS

WE, free people of America . . . proclaim to our valiant allies, the British Commonwealth of Nations, to the free peoples everywhere in the world, as well as to our godless enemies:

That we shall no longer witness with pity alone, and with passive sympathy, the calculated extermination of the ancient Jewish people by the barbarous Nazis . . .

Hitler decreed the extermination of the Jewish people as a prelude to his attack on all Christianity . . . Attacking "the Jew" has always been a wedge, military, diplomatic or ideological, driven into the ranks of Hitler's opponents . . .

And the Jews are being made to pay for every surge of heroism in enslaved countries . . . for every offensive operation of the United Nations . . . for every Axis setback, political or military.

TO commiserate is not enough. Our pity will not stay the doom of millions more. To pride ourselves on tolerance and good-will and to make predictions and promises that after the war somehow or other everybody and everything will naturally slip back into place is tantamount to evasion of harrowing reality. We will be judged guilty if we do not change our present attitude to a positive, bold course of moral action.

Darkness has spread over the world. But it is not yet dark enough not to recognize a brother. We will not fail so shamefully. For a single injustice makes our whole cause unjust and only justice is the guarantee of victory.

The role of leader has fallen to America. The eyes of all the world's oppressed and heavy-laden are on Washington. From this nation, free and mighty, the world expects the moral leadership for liberation.

THEREFORE from this day onward, as heirs of the glorious American tradition and by virtue of the great moral authority vested in our Nation at the present critical historic conjuncture, we, people of America, recognize that the solution of the age-old Jewish problem in Europe is one of the objectives of democracy and is a preliminary condition to permanent peace in the world.

We recognize the right of these Jews to return to their place among the free peoples of the earth; so that the remnant of tortured Israel, those who went through the fiery furnace of this war may take up life as a free people and raise their voice with the voices of other nations on earth in a new and supreme harmony, the harmony of mankind, which is that "genuine world civilization" for which President Roosevelt calls.

We recognize the right of the dispersed, disinherited Jews of Europe and the proud Jewish people of Palestine to fight as fellow partners in this war against our common foe; we recognize their right to fight in their own army, under their own insignia, on every battlefield of the world to which the United Nations' High Command will assign them. Thus, in a new regenerated humanity which will arise from the ruins of a world of blood and hatred, an end will be put to the scandal of history, of a great and ancient people compelled to haunt the corridors of Time as ghosts and beggars and waifs of every storm that rages.

And to that end, we, the undersigned, place our names on this proclamation, Nov. 17, 1942:

Obituaries

Allen C. Clark, Equitable Life Founder, Dead

Allen Culling Clark, 85, of 2020 O Street Northwest, founder of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. and one of Washington's leading historians died yesterday.

CLARK

He was born in Philadelphia but his family moved to Washington when he was 5 years old. He was educated in Washington schools and received a degree in law from the National University of Law in 1878.

An ardent admirer of President Lincoln Mr. Clark often saw the Civil War President on the street. Once, with his parents, he visited the White House and shook hands with the President. In 1882 he was married to Miss Sarah Pearce.

Mr. Clark practiced law here after his graduation. In 1885 he founded the Equitable company and became its secretary. Eventually he gave up his law practice to devote his entire time to the business of the company.

Recently he was guest of honor at the dinner celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Board of Trade, of which he was a charter member.

He had been president of the Columbia Historical Society and was the author of many articles about the District, including "Life and Letters of Dolly Madison," "Origin of the Federal City," and "Abraham Lincoln and the National Capital."

Besides his connection with the insurance company and the Historical Society, Mr. Clark was a director of the National Capital Bank, a trustee of the Columbia Title Insurance Co., a member of the board of managers of the Washington Academy of Science, a member of the Maryland Historical Society, the Virginia Historical Society and the Mississippi Valley Historical Society.

He is survived by a son, Henry W. Clark, three daughters, Miss Elizabeth G. Clark, Mrs. Dorothy Clark Winchcole, all of Washington, and Mrs. Mary Clark Gravely of Orlando, Fla., and two brothers, Appleton P. and Gilbert A. Clark of Washington.

Funeral services will be held from Hines funeral home, 2401 Fourteenth Street Northwest tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

War And Politics

By Roger W. Babson

Invasion or Strangulation

First let us remember that the United States is the only functioning constitutional democracy engaged in the war. Neither China nor Russia are democracies. Certainly none of the Axis countries are democracies. England has no written constitution, although this fact is not necessary for my thesis this week. Certainly England and her empire group are run on entirely different principles than is the United States.

All the above means that whether we like it or not, World War II is gradually bound to get into politics. Furthermore, the longer the war lasts the more it will become involved in politics. This is especially true as fear of American invasion or bombing disappears and there is a general feeling that we are bound to win. This is no reflection upon either the Republican or Democratic parties and least of all upon President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Having once been a presidential candidate myself, I want to definitely emphasize this point: World War II is bound to get into politics even if I or any reader of this column were President.

The question of whether we shall first whip Japan or Germany, or go at them both 50-50, is already a question of politics. Many Republicans, led by General MacArthur, are for whipping Japan first, or at least giving her 50-50 of the dosage; while most of the Democrats, led by the President, are for whipping Germany first. Furthermore, sectionalism is a factor in this connection. The Pacific Coast is especially fearful of Japan; while the Atlantic Coast is especially fearful of Europe. The great Middle West, led by the Chicago Tribune, is more or less noncommittal. Before Pearl Harbor this great section of the country was largely isolationist. Since then they have been very loyal, but in their hearts often wonder what it is all about.

Then, this country is divided as to whether we are acting independently enough. Some seem to regret that when pulling our chestnuts out of the fire we also are pulling out England's. Personally, I believe we owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to England and am not at all sympathetic with this group of "America Firsters."

In order to save ourselves we are obliged to save England, although we are not in this war, per se, to save the British Empire. If after the war a vote should be taken on what we should do for the British Empire, I am afraid our good English cousins would be disappointed. Therefore, this has become more or less of a political football, with the New Dealers lining up with the British Empire and the Republicans playing with the "America Firsters" program. This is further complicated by the leading Republican candidate for 1944, Wendell Willkie, taking a broadminded, global viewpoint; while another spectacular Republican, Clare Boothe Luce, backed by untold millions, seems to be for grabbing all we can for ourselves.

Perhaps the most important political struggle will develop in connection with the policy to be used in bringing Germany to her knees. One group favors the immediate invasion of Europe and I assume that President Roosevelt is back of these immediate invasion plans. By Europe, I mean the invasion of the Continent itself. Taking Norway is not invading Europe. Certainly if this is not the intention of the Roosevelt Administration it has been deceiving the American people. It is generally assumed that the real invasion jumping off points will be England, Norway, Africa and Turkey. The invasion may be centered at one point or scattered over several points. I am not a military man and am unable to comment on this problem. I do, however, understand that the Administration favors working 100 per cent with Russia and England. This means doing what Russia and England want as they are in the majority. Hence, I admit that an invasion may come at any time.

Some Republicans believe that the immediate invasion program would require an uncalled-for sacrifice on the part of our people. In this belief they may be backed by a majority of the mothers and fathers, sisters and sweethearts of the boys in the Army. Furthermore, the larger the Army becomes the more sympahtizers the Republicans will have to their substitute strangulization policy, rather than the Democratic invasion policy.

The Republicans might favor an invasion of Norway or Turkey in order to get bombing fields; but their primary object is to surround Germany and her conquered countries with a series of bombing fields in Russia, Norway, England, Turkey and Africa, and gradually bomb the daylights out of Germany. They also favor the same policy as to Japan. As a student of political history, I know it is inevitable that this problem will get into United States politics.

All this will tend to delay a 100 per cent war effort until after the 1944 elections. These are only 18 months away and 18 months will go very rapidly. In view of the uncertainties and disagreements outlined above, such delays are inevitable. The nearer we approach the time of elections, the easier it will be to leave many decisions until after the elections. Certainly, unless a real invasion takes place fairly soon, Germany and Japan can not be conquered before November, 1944. Therefore, it seems to me as a statistician that we will not have world peace until January, 1945, at the earliest.

What does this mean to my readers? It means that farmers, wage workers, transportation companies and other groups which have been prospering from the war are justified in planning on a honeymoon of at least 18 months longer. It means that businessmen and investors who have been suffering from the war must continue in their present situation for at least 18 months longer. On the other hand, all groups should remember that this global war is not going to end so suddenly as did World War I.

The final end will be seen far enough in advance so as to allow for discounting the event. Therefore, those interests now prospering with the war will begin to liquidate before the 18 months are up; while those who are now in the doghouse will be sticking their heads out the door and feeling chipper likewise in advance.

SwankGirls' School Home for Soldiers

them—deep carpets, richly framed pictures, and all.

But four hundred and fifty-nine soldiers now sleep in the mahogany beds and take their recreation in the ballroom, equipped with table tennis sets, writing desks and easy chairs.

The men are transferred from Walter Reed only after they have sufficiently recovered to get around. Most of them require only rest and routine checkups.

In the room devoted to physiotherapy, men with atrophied muscles and bone injuries are given water treatments and special exercises. A young soldier, shot through the thigh on the North African front, sat before a quadriceps, a contraption which helps flex the injured member. Nearby, three boys were receiving diathermy treatments and massage for injured backs.

A dental clinic, complete with seven chairs and the most advanced scientific techniques, a large gymnasium, occupational therapy departments, and eye, ear and nose clinics, care for most of the convalescents. There are six doctors, three dentists, two medical administrative officers, one warrant officer, and eleven nurses, both Army and reserve.

The annex is a community in itself—with a post exchange, a postoffice, and a chapel.

Twenty reporters, conducted through the annex by Lieut. Col. Carl W. Tempel, executive officer, were given an opportunity to observe how the institution is run.

The only District man to have seen overseas action is Pvt. Ralph F. West, 35, formerly of 9919 Rogart Road, Silver Spring, Md.

With 22 wards and 1100 beds, the annex expects eventually to accommodate one-third of Walter Reed's patients—those who are ambulatory and convalescing.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

It Looks a Little Dubious For That 'Summer Slump'

Earle Lists 'Hot' Bookings for Cool House; Its Proprietors Can't Kill Off 'GWTW'; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

A DECADE OR SO AGO, B. C. (Before Cooling), it used to be possible to toss a piano around in any of the downtown, first-run picture houses during the "heated term" without hitting anyone, they were that assiduously avoided by the judicious as just so many sweatboxes. But not any more. Under the moderating beneficences of scientific refrigeration, they have become the coolest places in the hottest of towns, which the burghers consistently pack for purposes of personal comfort more or less regardless of the attractions.

ANN SHERIDAN

Nevertheless, and with little enough encouragement from the weatherman, to date, the boys already are girding against the proverbial "summer slump." Especially the Warner boys. And particularly with regard to their Earle Theater. To give assurance that there will be something to appeal to more than the sense of feeling during the high temperatures presumably somewhere in the offing, the Earle is doing a little housetop shouting about its summer bookings. It seems that the line of march through the remainder of May, June and July will be something like this:

Immediately following the current Capital charade, "The More the Merrier," will come the picturization of former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies' "Mission to Moscow," a triumph of picture-making in which the principal roles are played by Walter Huston, Ann Harding, Oscar Homolka and several hundred others. Whether you agree with the "Mission" politically or not, it already has proved itself superlative entertainment and box-office dynamite.

On the heels of that one will come "Action in the North Atlantic," Humphrey Bogart's first since "Casablanca," in which this two-fisted star will be seen in a role unlike any other he has heretofore played—all about a convoy to Murmansk through the sub-infested North Atlantic. In sharp contrast will be the new Technicolor version of "Desert Song," with the story brought into consonance with the times and Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning singing the costellar roles. This should be the more eagerly awaited since the Morgan voice has been heard fragmentarily in "The Hard Way."

July will usher in Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," with the original cast seen and heard at the National, directed for the cameras by Michael Curtiz, maker of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Casablanca" and "Mission to Moscow." Another taken over from the stage will be Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," with Bette Davis and Paul Lukas in the stellar spots. Then another contrast in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," boasting Eddie Cantor, Errol Flynn, Ann Sheridan, Joan Leslie, Dinah Shore, Jack Carson, Olivia de Havilland, Bette Davis, Ida Lupino and numerous others among the principals relied upon to make it an "escapist" musical of de luxe dimensions.

Rounding out the summer fare, along about the time the nights begin to get cool, will be Frank Capra's production of that prodigious stage hit, "Arsenic and Old Lace," with Cary Grant at the top of the cast.

So, all right, turn on the heat!

There's a "Sleeper" in Town!

The procedures that opened David O. Selznick's marathonic Technicolor transcription of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" on the screen at the Gayety Theater yesterday, under the imprimatur of Sidney Lust, were a bit precipitate. Sooner than the drama desks could get into type with the announcement that Maurice Schwartz and the Yiddish Art Theater would be the Sunday attraction at the Ninth Street opera house, that booking was cancelled. Mr. Lust has been g-nashing his teeth ever since that no time remained in which to set up a powerful piece about "GWTW." As if it needed it! One of the things M-G-M's Mr. Tom Baldridge remarked when he stopped by last weekend was that every time it is suggested that "GWTW" be removed from circulation such a hue and cry is set up by the exhibitors and the company auditors that the idea unfailingly dies a-borning. I forget the exact figure, but, so far, the triple-length celluloid has grossed an inconsequential sum falling somewhere between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. Somebody ought to call this "sleeper" to public attention!

With Joel McCrea registering one of the hits of his life with Jean Arthur and Charles Coburn in "The More the Merrier," at the Earle, and his wife, Frances Dee, playing the feminine lead in "I Walked With a Zombie," at the Pix, it is interesting to recall that they were married while Miss Dee was playing opposite Walter Huston in "Keep 'Em Rolling," an RKO-Radio item that was filmed practically in its entirety across the river at Fort Myer. That was back in 1934, if you are keeping books on such things.

Dots and Dashes

It goes almost without saying that Mervyn LeRoy's picturization for M-G-M of James Hilton's "Random Harvest," co-starring Ronald Colman and Greer Garson, won the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award as the best picture for family consumption released in April . . . Nat Dorfman, one of the theater's foremost publicists, who is bringing "The Doughgirls" back to the National for Max Gordon on May 31, is opening a Hollywood branch office for his nationwide tub-thumping, with the Joseph Fields comedy as his first thump . . . Newest additions to the cas Wtashington will be seeing for the first time include Bruce MacFarlane, Theodore Newton, Reginald Mason and Mortimer Weldon—over, but probably not above, Arline Judge, Nicholas Joy, Joy Hodges, Muriel Hutchinson, et al . . . The Washington Juniors, Washington sponsors of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society Sanitorium, in Denver, Col., are putting on "This is the Whacks," in the nature of a satire on Berlin's "This Is the Army," at the Jewish Community Center, Sunday night, May 30, with the Barnee-Lowe Shoreham Hotel Orchestra to bolster the production . . . The Variety Club will be stagging it at "the year's best party" tonight, under the joint kinging of Paul "Roumanian" Young and old Col. James Jeremiah "Gay Nineties" Lake.

We-Went-to-One-Once Note

You'll be able to find any of the boys without any trouble in about three days!

'Ma' Hardy Wears Glam Gal Make-up

Hollywood.—For the first time in her career as "Ma" Hardy, Fay Holden will wear screen makeup, all because of her victory garden labors.

When the M.-G.-M. actress reported for tests for her new "Hardy Family" pictures, she was so sunburned the cameraman couldn't photograph her "au naturel." So she'll wear a glamour girl makeup.

Costarred in Keith's Continuing Hit

FRED MacMURRAY AND ROSALIND RUSSELL as they appear in the principal roles in the RKO-Radio production of "Flight for Freedom," generally accepted as a drama that might be based on the career of the late Amelia Earhart, which is now soaring along in its second successful week at RKO-Keith's Theater. Also cast in a role of prime importance is Herbert Marshall, with such as Eduardo Ciannelli, Walter Kingsford, Damian O'Flynn and Matt McHugh in support

HEDDA HOPPER

The Housing Problem

Hollywood, Calif., May 16.—Just as Judy Garland rented Mary Martin's house, Mary wanted it back. . . . George Brent interested in a truck farm up in Susanville. . . . George and Alan Curtis had some heated words over Ilona Massey at a night club . . . Bill Goetz interested in Sophie Tucker's story, "Some of These Days," as a starring vehicle for Alice Faye . . . Ginger Rogers' mama, Lela, signed to a writing and coaching contract at RKO . . . Claire Trevor has darkened her hair and says she'll play only ladies—not ladies of the eve—from now on. When Eddie Buzzell flew to Chicago to listen to Jimmy Joy's orchestra, Society Warbler Sunny Griffith met him. No talk of a picture contract. Eddie's in love . . . Paramount will probably get Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman and Sam Wood for the premiere of "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in New York come July.

MARY MARTIN

Really Gets Going

John Garfield, on a layoff, gets a week's salary when he goes to Chicago to appear for "I Am An American" day. Garfield's finished his first camp tour and won't stop acting. It's not bad either. He did his whole routine for me, including his song—knocked himself out. While playing in South Carolina, half his audience walked out. They'd gotten an order to patrol the railroad throughout the State. They wondered who was coming through, and as they stood in line, out on the back platform bounced Fala. Then they knew it was the President's train. John ran into Pvt. Zero Mostel, broke all rules by having Zero dine with him in the Officers' Club. Mostel kept saying, "They can break me for this!" "How?" quipped John, "by making you back into a civilian?" Took his hat off to little Ann Gwynn. So did the boys. He introduced her as the "sexless girl." They did a burlesque on "Now Voyager"—Ann in a revealing dress of black satin. When he'd finished, I said, "You're as big a ham as Bob Hope." He yelled, "Who do you suppose taught me this stuff?"

Then That Has Gits

Tonio Sellwart, of the quick smile and large bank account, signed for top role in "A Thousand Shall Fall."

In London they didn't ration women's hats, but here the WPB has put them on its list. They'll control size. Gosh! If they get smaller you'll be wearing nothing but a humming bird . . . Pvt. George Cukor headin' for home after his honorable discharge. George is 'way over 38 . . . The Fred Astaires, together with both sons, relaxing for a couple of weeks on his turkey ranch . . . Johnny Farrow and Joe Sistrom off to Washington to get more dope on "Hitler's Gang." For Pete's sake! Don't they read the newspapers?

Ho, Hum!

What a giggle you'd get if you knew the real reason Dorothy Thompson is doing those raves against "Mission to Moscow." It's not what you might ordinarily expect . . . Jack Benny's favorite picture of Bing Crosby is one in which Bing's face is completely hidden behind Benny . . . Paulette Goddard wants to go overseas—doesn't wish to return here to play in "All Around Town." She'd be tired of that before starting. That's what she's doing in New York . . . Lionel Barrymore, for his birthday, got an old yellow copy of Richard Strauss' Waldron Concerto, opus 11, from James Stagliano.

Three to a Name

Every time Lewis Milestone says "Ann, do this or do that" on the "North Star" set, a trio of heads turn. There's Ann Harding, Baxter and Carter. In the picture there's an unforgettable scene between Walter Huston and Erich von Stroheim. Each actor underplays the other. I'll put my money on Walter . . . Walter Slezak missed the premiere of "This Land Is Mine." He was addressing the Farmers' Association in Bucks County, Pa.—got so warmed up to his subject he forgot all about time . . . Smart of Jeanette MacDonald to open her "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal. When and if she reaches the Metropolitan, she'll be an experienced opera star, maybe . . . Joan Blondell was asked about her household duties, such as hiring and firing of servants. "Are you kidding?" came back Joan . . . Jean Arthur is getting requests for leg art . . . John Phillip Sousa will be one of the characters in "Gone Are the Days," built around the Chautauqua circuit, where Sousa made history

Trans-Lux

The sensational swing of the war in the direction of United Nations victory makes the news section the dominant factor on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater.

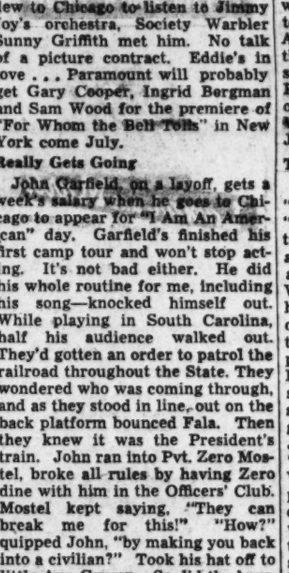
The Allied shift from defensive to offensive operations is reflected in the news clips devoted to "Victory in Tunisia," the occupation of Amchitka by United States forces and the sudden awakening of this country to the necessity of vigorous attack in the Aleutians.

The news reporting, however, does not end there. There are innumerable other interesting subjects, including the five-ply ship launching by the Dionne quintuplets, General Giraud inspecting mountains of war supplies, the donation of two warplanes by Government girls under the sponsorship of The Washington Post, Count Fleet winning the Preakness, etc.

The short-reel division is headed by "Diving Daredevils," a sports-reel devoted to the skill of some of the foremost tower and springboard divers, including Joe Seymour, Joe Peterson and Whitey Hart, and the issue of "Information Please," in which John Carradine, stage and screen star, appears as guest expert.

The Victory Reel for the week is the universally shown "Weapons for Victory," stressing the value of lend-lease to the global war effort, and laughs are purveyed by Disney's "Bellboy Donald," which is description enough.

Beauty a la Rose



This unnamed coryphee, one of a stageful, gives a sketchy idea of the pulchritude assembled in Billy Rose's "Diamond Horseshoe Revue," now decorating the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater, with Gilda Gray, Charles King and Aunt Jemima costarred

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 16.

At the height of one of Fiorello LaGuardia's bitterest fights, he told some of his friends: "Here's how I feel"—and he dictated a letter of resignation. The letter then was typed and submitted to him for signature . . . Fiorello read the letter, and showed it to Samuel Seabury and others. They were startled, and silent, and waited. "That's just the way I feel," said LaGuardia—who then proceeded to tear up the letter, adding: "But now I feel better."

THORNTON WILDER

Lord Beaverbrook probably will remain in America for a while, with a new war job . . . Beveridge, creator of the Beveridge Plan, is here at the invitation of the Rockefeller Foundation. During his stay, he will receive a number of honorary degrees . . . The producer of "The Skin of Our Teeth," Michael Meyerberg, had a summons and complaint ready to serve, in a libel suit against the Sat. Rev. of Literature because of its article alleging that Thornton Wilder had plagiarized from James Joyce's "Ulysses." When the Pulitzer Prize was awarded to the play last week, Meyerberg decided against suing, saying that the prize was a vindication.

A. P. Herbert, the British humorist who runs Punch, not only is a member of Parliament but also is a petty officer, assigned to patrol work along the Thames. Petty Officer Herbert, M. P., worked the Thames run during the heaviest blitz, picking up people who were blown into the river, searching for mines, etc. . . . One recent afternoon the admiral in charge of naval intelligence visited Herbert aboard his boat. Because the admiral was in full uniform, Herbert had him "piped over the side" of this small craft operated by men in grimy sweaters. Then he presented the admiral with his newest book, and inscribed it: "At Sea—Off Charing Cross."

Saul Haas, who owns Station KIRO in Seattle and is the collector of the port in that city, is one of the West's most dynamic personages. In his hotel room in Washington last week, Haas quickly placed phone calls for New York, Milwaukee, Seattle, St. Paul, Portland, Los Angeles. A visitor in his room then picked up the phone, and timidly told the operator, "Short distance, please."

The booklet advising American soldiers how to behave in England received much publicity there. One of the British women's auxiliaries, the NAAFI, has issued its own booklet, explaining the American visitors to its members. The booklet is illustrated with photos of the American Army insignias and explains some of the idiosyncrasies of speech. "If an American approaches and says 'Har'ya, Babe,'" the booklet reads, "that is not a sign of impudence, but of good will. That phrase, 'Har'ya, Babe,' is the equivalent of 'Lovely day, isn't it?'"

The Young Republicans, now convening upstate, have been challenged by the Affiliated Young Democrats to take a stand on the proposed legislation granting voting rights to 18-year-olds . . . Life magazine is preparing a spread on all the Republican candidates for '44. Bricker and Dewey now are being photographed . . . Michael Redgrave, who starred in "The Lady Vanishes" and "The Stars Look Down," was granted a leave of absence from the Royal Navy, in which he serves as a seaman, to star in the movie adaptation of Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock." He finished the movies and is back on his ship, still as a seaman.

Last week a short, stout man, accompanied by a lady, entered a leather-goods store on Sixth Avenue. The man began to examine some leather traveling bags, selected one, and asked the price . . . "So you're taking a trip, Mr. Litvinoff?" asked the storekeeper. "You are Mr. Litvinoff, aren't you?" . . . The customer shrugged and protested: "Who, me?" . . . Madame Litvinoff told the storekeeper: "There is a resemblance, isn't there? People are always saying that."

Senators Barkley and Chandler are at odds now because Barkley won't unite with Chandler in selecting the next Governor of Kentucky . . . "Prelude to War" will be exhibited in every Warner theater . . . Arthur Treacher will remain with the Ziegfeld "Follies" . . . Jack Cole fainted during each of the last performances of the "Follies." Cole now wears a belt with built-in smelling salts . . . Burnett Hershey, the commentator who went to Africa, reports that the Italian prisoners are learning German, to feel more at home when they get back to Italy.

Location Company Departs for South

Hollywood.—A third company of "A Guy Named Joe," left M.-G.-M. last night for location sequences to be shot at Columbia, S. C. Under unit managership of Jay Merchant, a group of 33, including Billy Kaplan, director, and Jack Smith, cameraman, will remain in the South for two weeks. The scenes will be used for the English locale of the aviation story which stars Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne.

From there the troupe leaves for Drew Field, Tampa, Fla., to duplicate backgrounds in a New Guinea jungle air field in the film.

Another location unit remains at Luke Field, Phoenix, Ariz., where plane flying backgrounds are being photographed.

Dramatic sequences with the two stars are now being directed by Victor Fleming on the M.-G.-M. lot.

A Diverting Double Bill at Pix

For those whose susceptibilities lie near the surface, there is a likely double-bill on view at the Pix Theater, where it will continue through Friday.

Although the two major attractions are nothing alike, they share the same leading man in the competent person of Tom Conway. "I Walked With a Zombie" is one of those ostensibly eerie numbers that enters with no great profundity and not quite so many shivers as might be expected into the pseudo-scientific phenomenon of the "living dead." "The Falcon Strikes Back," on the other hand, offers a thoroughly glib and entertaining "whodunit," in which the clever detective-crooy pays off a score intended to be owing him. The contrast between the two is sufficient to cover a wide catholicity of public taste.

In the purely personal opinion of your typewriter, emphasis has been placed on the wrong film as top half of the double bill. There is more get-up-and-go in "The Falcon" than there is chills-and-fevers in the "Zombie" item.

Love and Voodooism

In "I Walked With a Zombie," attempt has been made to harmonize an extravagantly far-fetched love story with the blood-chilling implications of tropical voodooism. They mix none too well. However, something of suspense is generated when Betsy Connell, and nurse employed to restore a wife's health, takes her charge through the dense jungle to the frenzied drum-beaters and hysterical ministrations of the witch doctors. James Ellison, Frances Dee, Tom Conway, Edith Barrett and Teresa Harris are the principal players in this fantastic recital and acquit themselves as capably as possible in the face of the bizarre situation they encounter.

"The Falcon Strikes Back," as we were saying, is a brisk and often amusing cops-and-robbers yarn, in which Mr. Conway, in the title role, has far greater opportunities than in its companion piecce on the bill. It follows a familiar formula but in a thoroughly diverting manner, contributed to by a cast of considerable dimensions.

Those rendering Mr. Conway the most valuable assistance include Harriet Hilliard, Jane Randolph, Edgar Kennedy, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, Rita Corday, Wynne Gibson, Richard Loo and Ed Gargan.

Walt Disney's "Beach Picnic," with Donald Duck and Pluto starred; the news events and other shorts complete a program that is primarily a field day for RKO-Radio, producer of both major features.

Nats Win Pair From Tigers, 7 to 1 and 10 to 6

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Something's screwey about the baseball that's being played in the big leagues this season. The frequency of shut-outs and low-hit games doesn't add up. The balance between the pitching and the normal expectancy of hitting is out of whack, sadly.

POVICH

The pitchers ought to blush at what has been happening. They know they're not that good. In the years when the big leagues were populated with the best pitchers they ever owned, their records as a whole weren't as impressive as the figures the current crop of pitchers are compiling.

This year's pitchers have gotten two whopping breaks, (1) the dead ball and (2) the induction of so many good hitters into the service. The pitching ranks have been weakened, too, by enlistments and draft calls, but the balata ball and it's none-too-lively successor, and the wholesale invasion of the batting orders by bush leaguers have more than taken up the slack.

The figures show how the pitchers have been in the driver's seat ever since the season started. There were 15 shut-outs in the American League in the first three weeks, and more low-hit, extra-inning games than ever before in early-season history. Guys who were just ordinary pitchers in the minors last season have become hot stuff in the big leagues this year.

Ewald Pyle of the Nats, for instance, was able to win only eight games for Toledo last year, but he's terrific this season in the majors. Jesse Flores, the A's little right-hander was no great shucks with Los Angeles in 1942, but he has pitched the best baseball in the American League this year. Alex Carrasquel, who won seven and lost seven for the Nats in 1942, won his first four games this year.

The pitchers got another break, too, apparently, when the teams were forced to train in the North. They're far ahead of the hitters in conditioning. Indoor workouts were all right for the pitchers who aimed to get their arms in shape, but they were a poor substitute for outdoor batting practice for the hitters.

Buck Ross of the White Sox was never any great shucks in previous seasons. Yet the other day he held the Yankees to one scratch hit. That isn't too startling, though. Ross didn't have to contend with Joe DiMaggio, Phil Rizzuto, Red Rolfe and Tommy Henrich, who now work for the armed forces. The current Yankee batting order shouldn't terrify any pitcher.

Johnny Vander Meer of the Reds held the Boston Braves to two hits the other day. Vander Meer is apt to turn in that kind of a job against any club. But he couldn't win the other day. He lost, 1 to 0, because Nate Andrews held the Reds to three hits. Who is Andrews? Well, he was a punk when the Indians, Red Sox and Browns owned him, and such startling improvement doesn't add up. Bluntly, we don't think Andrews is that good a pitcher. But between the dead ball and a weak Cincinnati batting order, he could beat the Reds, 1-0.

For the first two weeks of the season, the pitcher who didn't acknowledge in his prayers that he was thankful for the balata ball was an ingrate. That was pitcher's paradise. It was rare when an outfielder had to take a backward step to catch even the longest drive against that pumpkin the hitters were swinging at.

They say the new model is a livelier ball, but that can be argued, too. At best it looks and acts only slightly more lively than the balata. To this point, four clubs in the league, the Athletics, Red Sox, White Sox and Nats have a total of three home runs. Boston's homer was an inside-the-park affair that was helped by poor handling. The Nats haven't hit one yet. The Yankees lead the league with a total of eight homers. Babe Ruth himself would hit that many in the same space of time.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, who has been beefing about his outfielding, differed violently the other day with a fellow who suggested that Northern training hand handicapped his outfielders. "Northern training, hell," said Cronin, "Dom Di Maggio could go farther for a ball the first day he reported to a training camp than all of these fellows can go after a month of the season. They're just not good outfielders. The Army has 'em all."

Admittedly, the big league pitchers aren't as skillful as the prewar crop, because too many good ones have entered the armed services, but the figures are very flattering to 'em. There are three teams in the league which are hitting less that .217. With that sort to contend with, boy, fetch me my toe plate.

Griffs Move To 3d Place By Victories

Wynn and Candini Winning Hurlers; Vernon Hits Homer

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Mich., May 16. — The Nats made themselves heard in the American League pennant race today. They made a lot of noise at bat by blasting the ball into and against the Briggs' Stadium stands and they made 23,399 Tiger fans holler "Ouch" as they punched out a double victory by 7-1 and 10-6 scores.

The Nats suddenly turned sluggers with 21 solid base knocks for the afternoon and that pulled shot into the right field stands in the fifth inning of the first game was Washington's first home run of the season, a Mickey Vernon production.

Early Wynn coasted behind some solid sticking in the opener to win his first game of the season and Milo Candini came in for the triumph in the nightcap, in a relief role, after Alex Carrasquel tossed away a 6-run lead with a horrible sixth inning.

Nats In Third Place

The Nats moved into third place, just a half-game out of second and only 1½ games behind the league-leading Yankees. They knocked the Tigers all the way to fifth and the Nat pitchers stopped Pinkey Higgins', the league's leading hitter cold for the day.

Vernon, who batted in four runs in the opener, George Case, who made four hits for the day and Gerry Priddy, with five hits were all big men in the Nats' attack. That Priddy was a picture around second base, too, as he figured in four of the Nats' five double plays.

The Tigers had been tagging Carrasquel for the first five innings but untimely hitting and unsmart base running had held them scoreless. In the sixth Dick Wakefield led off with his third hit of the day, a solid single and after Higgins flied out, Rip Radcliff doubled, Rudy York was safe on a pop fly single, Jimmy Bloodworth hit a triple into deepest center and Pinchhitter Ned Harris, who batted for Parsons, walked. Don Ross, batting for starting pitcher Stubby Overmire, grounded to Clary but Bloodworth scored when Clary and Angelo Giulani let him get away after trapping him off third.

Johnson Gets Three Hits

That was enough for Carrasquel and Candini's first act was to pitch a single to Joe Hoover, scoring two runners and tying the score. The big Italian youngster was in complete control after that, however, and the Nats gave him a four-run working margin in the eighth.

Bob Johnson, who snapped out of his hitting doldrums with three safeties in the second game, scored Mickey Vernon in the eighth with a triple over Roger Cramer's head in center. Vernon had walked. Cramer then dropped Spence's long fly for a so-called three-base

Double Steal Nets Run for Nats in Double Win

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

When Jake Early stole second in the fourth inning of yesterday's double-header between the Nats and Detroit Tigers, at Detroit yesterday, Gerry Priddy dashed for home when Catcher Paul Richards fired the ball to Second-Sacker Jimmy Bloodworth. Priddy beat Bloodworth's return throw for the Nats' third run with a fast sprint and hard slide. The Nats won both games, 7-1 and 10-6.

Homer Wins Nightcap For Indians; Lose 1st

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 16.—The Cleveland Indians salvaged the nightcap of a double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics today to remain one game behind the pace-setting New York Yankees.

The Tribe dropped the first contest, 5 to 3, but Roy Cullenbine's eighth-inning homer into the lower right-field stands broke a scoring deadlock in the second engagement and produced a 3-to-2 win.

Jim Bagby hurled the last two innings against the Mackmen and received credit for the victory—his fourth against one defeat.

Jesse Flores recorded his fifth straight victory in pitching the A's to a 5-to-3 decison in the opener. The Redskins outhit the Mackmen, 10 to 7, but were not able to bunch their blows.

Yankees Beat Browns, 7-3, Then Lose, 4-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 16.—Rookie Floyd Baker, a .326 hitter with San Antonio of the Texas League last year, was the hero today as the St. Louis Browns nosed out the league leading New York Yankees in 10 innings 4 to 3 to split even in a double-header.

Baker batted for Don Gutteridge in the last of the tenth of the second game with the winning run on second and one out. He singled deep into center and Speedy Mark Christman, a pinch runner, sped home.

Stephens opened the Browns' half of the tenth with a single and slid into second as McQuinn sacrificed. But on that slide he hurt his leg and that brought in Christman as a runner. Stephens was taken to a hospital for examination. Then Baker did his stuff.

The Yanks won the first game 7 to 3 with Charley Keller and Rollie Hemsley hitting home runs.

Phillies Divide WithCardinals, 2-1 and 4-3

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 16.—The rejuvenated Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals—world champions—split a pair of nifty pitching duels today before a crowd of 30,823 at Shibe Park, the biggest major league attendance of the day and the second largest National League turnout in Philadelphia history.

Lynn "Schoolboy" Rowe and Howard Krist battled overtime in the opener before the Cards pushed over a run in the eleventh inning on a surprise squeeze bunt by Whitey Kurowski to win, 4 to 3. Rookie southpaw Al Gerheauser of the Phils outpitched Happy Gumbert in the afterpiece to chalk up his first win of the campaign, 2 to 1.

Red Sox Split With Chisox

Chicago, May 16 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox scored four runs in one inning today to beat the Boston Red Sox 4 to 2, but lost the second game of the double-header 4 to 2 when Luke Appling's wild throw let in two runs.

The White Sox took the opener with a four-run uprising in the fourth inning against Heber Newsome. Successive singles by Ralph Hodgin, Don Kolloway and Wally Moses and a home run inside the park by Jimmy Grant accounted for the four tallies.

Braves Grab Double-Header From the Reds

Boston, May 16 (AP).—The Boston Braves extended their current victory streak to four straight today as they swept a double header from the Cincinnati Reds, 3-1 and 6-1, to strengthen their grip on third place in the National League standing.

"Red" Barrett won his own game in the opener by lashing out a third inning double with the bases full to drive across three runs and then going on to limit the Reds to four scattered hits.

Jim Tobin chalked up his third successive triumph in the nightcap, aided by Phil Masi's grand slam homer in the third.

Giants Divide With Pirates

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Manager Mel Ott hit his third homer in three days to win another game for the New York Giants today in the opener of a double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-1, but he went hitless in the nightcap as the Buccaneers won, 2-1.

Johnny Wittig and big Max Butcher engaged in a pitchers' duel in the first game and the Giants were outhit, 7 to 6. But Billy Jurges hit a round-tripper in the fifth and Ott came through in the eighth with one aboard to break a tie score.

Eastern Nine Meets Roosevelt as Wilson Plays Central Team; Both Games Tuesday

With six interhigh baseball games sharing the spotlight with the annual interhigh school track and field meet, local sports fans are in for another busy week on the high-prep front. Twenty-one diamond encounters, including the sextet of series games, are booked for the coming week. A quartet of tennis maches, with a brace of itnerhigh tussles being featured, are also on the docket, as are northern Virginia track championships and the annual inter-junior high school track meet.

Tuesday undefeated Eastern, currently leading the series, will play host to Roosevelt, still in the race. The Ramblers will probably send Dave Leonarduzzi, who has a pair of four-hit games to his credit in one series, to the hill, while the Riders will rely on Leigh Joy, who has been strictly an in-and-outer. Wednesday, Wilson and Central will battle on the Vikings' diamond. Jack Ogle, who has won his only two series starts, allowing 7 hits in the two games, will hurl for the Tigers and his opponent will be either Joe Tucker or "Red" Hayden. Tech will play at Coolidge today.

On Friday the fans might get a possible glimpse at the playoffs, when Tech and Eastern get together at Eastern.

Roosevelt and Wilson have been installed as cofavorites in the interhigh track meet, which runs for two days. Tech and Central are rated as dark horses and either could pull an upset and win the title.

On the tennis front, four matches are listed. Interhigh encounters are: Central versus Western at Pierce Mill, and Coolidge, winner of the Sidwell Friends' Tourney this year, going against Roosevelt, defending champs, at Rock Creek.

The week's card:

Monday: Baseball—Gonzaga at National Training School, Georgetown Prep at Landon, Briarley at Charlotte Hall, Montgomery Blair at Anacostia, †Tech at Coolidge.

Tuesday: Baseball—†Wilson at Central; Tuesday: Baseball—†Roosevelt at Eastern, Devitt at Montgomery Blair, Bethesda Chevy Chase at Washington-Lee.

Tennis—*St. James at St. Albans.

Wednesday: Baseball—Gonzaga at Bethesda-Chevy Chase, *St. James at Landon, Montgomery Blair at National Training School, Washington-Lee at Roosevelt, †Wilson at Central.

Tennis—†Central vs. Western at Pierce Mill, †Coolidge vs. Roosevelt at Rock Creek.

Thursday: Baseball—George Washington High at Washington-Lee.

Fate Hangs on Punch

Petro Makes Ring Bid Tonight Against Wilson

Danny Petro, Washington's "Walloping Wop," and former champion Jackie Wilson of Pittsburgh measure each other as they await the gong which will send them into action tonight in their headline featherweight bout tonight at Griffith Stadium in Promoter Joe Turner's first outdoor show.

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Danny Petro, Washington's "Walloping Wop," tonight will place his future featherweight hopes of greatness in the dynamite-laden southpaw punch of his, when he tangles with Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson, twice former N. B. A. champion, over a 10-round route, or less, at Griffith Stadium in Promoter Joe Turner's first outdoor card of the season.

Although Danny will enter the ring on the short end of a price that may run as high as 2 to 1 in some quarters, the little Italian from Southeast is supremely confident of his knocking out the former champion and pushing his presence full into the featherweight title scramble. In fact, Danny has flatly stated he will flatten Jackie—a boast of no little proportions.

Fourteen times in his short but sensational career, Danny has climbed through the ropes as a professional. Thirteen times he has slapped down his foes. The one defeat on his record—a six round decision to Billy Reed—he avenged the next time they met, knocking out the former Indianapolis Golden Glove winner in one heat.

Wilson Is Tough

Against Wilson, however, a wily and ring wise veteran, Danny will be going against one of the toughest customers in the business. Wilson, with a good punch himself and unquestionably the better boxer of the two, can take a punch and come back for more. It isn't everyday a youngster of Danny's limited experience knocks out a performer of Jackie's caliber. And tonight, almost everyone, except Danny, thinks Jackie is going to give the inexperienced local boy a boxing lesson.

But Wilson has been warned to stay away from Danny's left hand. The many who think Danny will be taught a lesson are also well aware that if Danny lands with his mule's kick, Jackie is going to go down and out—or at least be slowed down where he definitely will not be at his fastest.

His Biggest Fight

It is the most important fight in Danny's young career. Should he win, he will be squarely in the middle of the featherweight picture, and must be mentioned along with the Calluras, Peps, Bartolos in future rankings and when the time arrives for championship bouts.

Charley Petro, Danny's welterweight brother, will take on Soldier Joel Sole, of Richmond in an eight; Billy Bates, lightweight stablemate of Wilson's, will meet Sammy Daniels, of Baltimore, in another eight; and Jimmy McGriff and Tiger Nelson will collide in an opening six.

Applejack Jumps to Win Show's Blues

Appearing for the first time under the colors of Capt. Alvin Kay, the veteran fencer Applejack yesterday won the jumper championship of the North End Horse Show in Silver Spring, Md.

Applejack piled up a total of 13 points for the title, thus earning a 5-point lead over his nearest rival, Anita Mammele's Gaddy's Trump, ridden by Danny Durham.

Gardner Hallman, under whose ownership Applejack has shown for the past two years, had the mount on the big black gelding to win blues in the open and warm-up jumpers outings and take second to his stablemate, Smacko, in the modified Olympia.

Pvt. Bobby Lee, home on furlough from the Pacific Coast, took his first horseback ride in eight months to win four ribbons with his Bonne Fille, one a blue, among the hunter hacks.

HACKS—Won by Mrs. R. B. Shorter's Starlight; second, Jimmy Edleblut's Kesteven; third, Mrs. F. Stone's Sing Song; fourth, Mrs. Mothershead's Honey Child.

Grays Annex 2 From Elites, 2-1 and 7-0

Opening the Negro National League season at Griffith Stadium, the Washington Homestead Grays defeated the Baltimore Elite Giants in a double-header yesterday, before 10,000, annexing the first game by beating Tom Glover, 2-1, and the nightcap, by trimming Bill Harvey, 7-0. Bill Brown was accredited with the shutout.

Josh Gibson, who smashed out four doubles for the afternoon, scored the first run in the second inning on a walk, a sacrifice to second by Sam Bankhead, and a hit to rightfield by Vic Harris. The count was tied, 1-all, in the fourth when Kimbro tripled to right, and came home on Bill Scales' long fly to Benjamin.

In the same inning, Gibson scored the winning run with a double to left field, followed by Easterling's hit against the right-field fence. The second game, a 7-inning affair, was sewed up early, the first run, by "Cool Papa" Bell, being driven in by Gibson's third double of the afternoon, in the first inning.

Nats Win Two From Tigers, 7-1 and 10-6

error and Priddy and Pinchhitter Jake Early followed with singles. Candini scored Priddy on a squeeze play. The four runs were off Hal White.

The Nats met up with Overmire, the Tiger rookie who had won his only two major league starts in the second game and they gave him a rough session. The first six men to face him reached base, two on fielder's choices, Clary, Case and Johnson on singles and Priddy with a slicing double down the right field line.

Case scored a run on sheer speed in the third after drawing a walk. He stole second, took third on Bixie Parsons' wild throw and scored on a short fly to Mickey Vernon, beating an accurate throw to the plate by Cramer. Singles by Vernon, Johnson and Spence accounted for two more runs in the sixth.

The only blotch on the Nats' performance today was Detroit's sixth inning of the nightcap when the Tigers pulled out of a 6-0 deficit into a 6-6 tie, just like that.

The Nats started their double-play-an-inning production in the second when Jake Early whipped a throw to second to catch York who was off on a 3-2 pitch to Bloodworth when the former Nat struck out. Wynn started a twin killing in the third by grabbing a hot liner off Roger Cramer's bat and in the fourth Priddy, Sullivan and Vernon whipped the ball over the usual route. The fourth double play was another Priddy-Sullivan-Vernon production in the sixth.

The Tigers had only four men left on base as Wynn pitched his best game since blanking the A's for 13 innings nearly three weeks ago. The Nats backed him up with a flawless and at times sensational defense.

The Nats scored first on a double steal, Early coming up with a nice job of stalling between first and second as Priddy snuck in with a run. After Vernon's homer in the fourth Mickey inserted a two-run single in the Nat's big seventh when they came up with four runs off Johnny Gorsica.

Jockey Butsy Hernandez who has plied his trade around these parts for many years is in a defense job and has quit the saddle for the duration. I guess I'm just a camera-baiter but I've contended for a long time that certain finish photography favors the outside horse. I got all steamed up when Steel Beam was declared the winner over Rare last week so the photographer said I could make any test I desired. I don't want any blocks set up. I want horses. I'll let you know the result. Galt Davis says he will furnish the horses. Maj. Goss L. Stryker, president of Laurel, has gone to New York to confer with the track owners about the fall meeting at his plant. So far the Maryland Racing Commission hasn't put the O. K. on Hagerstown dates but I see no reason against them. The Hagerstown track is in the city and only a short walk from the main street. Two assistant starters are recuperating from injuries suffered when a horse bit them before the meeting opened. Apprentice Vince Bracciale who had that wild 3-mile ride when Miss Defiance ran off last week had not fully recovered when he was bruised in a starting gate accident. John Turner travels to and from his duties as patrol judge on a pony. Bill Psillas' "meatless Friday" at the town's top restaurant went over in excellent style. Jockey Stanley Austin is the proud father of a boy born last Friday. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SAINT PYREWICK is a doubtful starter but will be hard to whip if sent postward with these. MOWMET and WAR TARGET seem best of those assured a starting chance.

Second race—LADY JAFFA closed much ground in her last and should turn back these. EXARCH and AT BAT, recent winners, probably will fill out the money bracket.

Third race—CELTIC KNIGHT gets my call in this sprint. Won impressively last out. WAUGH SCOUT is reported fit and may lead MIGHTY BUSY to the wire.

Fourth race—VENDOR'S LIEN carries top weight but is fit as hands make horses. SILVER BEAM won last out. ORLENE is in light and deserves some attention.

Fifth race—SIR JEROME gets the inside post position and should make the most of it in this distance affair. GROUCHY and SOME GROUCHER always go well over this oval.

Sixth race—HIGH STANDARD has shopped around for a spot and this one looks right. FIELD OF GOLD won here. ATTACHE for the minor money.

Seventh race—NEVER HOME belongs on top if the track is fast, but if the course is off I'll take HAPPY HANNAH. BUTTERMAN is rounding into top shape and belongs close.

Eighth race—JACK HORNER has a class edge on these and I see no reason for mistakes. ALSELEDA and DANZIG to fill out the cash circle.

Best bet—CELTIC KNIGHT.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Army Disturbed by Defects in Airplane Engines

SOME of the biggest bigwigs in the Air Corps have flown out to Cincinnati recently to probe a serious situation in the Wright aeronautical plant uncovered by the Truman Committee. Among the worried officials visiting the Wright plant are Assistant Secretary of War Lovett, Lieut. Gen. William Knudsen, Col. Bill O'Dwyer (former candidate for Mayor of New York, now the Air Corps' chief investigator) and Gen C. R. Branshaw of Dayton, Ohio.

What the Truman Committee found was certain alleged defects in airplane motors, plus lack of careful inspection.

Engines were tested, in part, by running a pink liquid through the cylinders, and if any of this pink coloring came through, it indicated there was a leak some place and the cylinders were defective. However, even when defects were indicated, testimony taken by the Truman Committee states that the engines were okayed by inspectors.

General Knudsen, long the production wizard for General Motors, wrote a report following his trip to Cincinnati, tending to play down the seriousness of the Truman Committee findings. He said that almost all engines had minor defects in them and that the pink markings which indicated defects were not serious.

However, the Army appears worried over the entire situation and is moving in to clear it up. One factor difficult to explain is the Truman Committee testimony that two inspectors objected vigorously to okaying engines which appeared defective.

They were Civil Service employes of the Army, not of the Wright Co. Eventually the two protesting inspectors were transferred, one of them being told not to set foot on Wright property again, according to the testimony.

This is what looks bad. The Truman Committee is waiting for the Army to clean up the situation completely.

Memo to the President

MEMO TO THE PRESIDENT: The antitank troops you saw at Dallas, Tex., on your recent trip to Mexico were not from the Eighth Service Command, as was represented to you. They were from Camp Hood at Temple, Tex.

What happened was that the Eighth Service Command at Dallas wanted to make the biggest and best possible showing for you, but had no big antitank guns, or bazookas. So they sent to Camp Hood for a company of bazooka men.

When the latter arrived, very proud to appear before the President, and wearing their insignia of a leopard biting a tank, they were made to remove these insignia before they paraded before you.

The House on R Street

IT WAS partly the fact that former Gov. Bob Hurley of Connecticut was involved in a company making war goods that caused the hard-working House Military Affairs Committee to prick up its ears and delve deeper into the now famous "Big Red House on R. Street."

Former Governor Hurley turned up as vice president of the Narragansett Machine Tool Co. of Pawtucket, R. I., a firm whose Washington agent shelled out $3300 to Mrs. Eula Smith, hostess of the R Street house.

It also appeared that former Governor Hurley had been of considerable help to the Narragansett company, at least as far as monetary influence goes.

The company had received a subcontract from the Ford Motor Co. to manufacture gun mounts for the Army; also had received a two-million-dollar loan from a Boston bank, guaranteed 90 per cent by the Government.

Most of this two-million-dollar loan was spent "tooling up" for the Ford subcontract, then the contract was canceled because the demand for gun mounts had declined. That was the "official" reason for the cancellation. Another was that the Narragansett firm needed reorganization.

At this point, after Ford's cancellation, the company's loan risk dropped. A good part of the two million dollars had been spent. Then suddenly the War Department renewed the loan, this time with a 100 per cent guarantee instead of 90 per cent.

It was about this time that ex-Governor Hurley stepped into the picture.

An accountant for the company, testifying before the committee, said that Hurley drew a salary of $12,000, came to Pawtucket about once a week and that he rarely saw him.

Just what the company got through the $3300 paid by its agent Albert Bennett Fey to Mrs. Eula Smith on R Street, nobody has quite found out yet.

NOTE: Chairman May and the Military Affairs Committee wisely are not permitting the house on "R" Street mysteries to deter them from much more important though less spectacular wartime matters. They are going ahead with vital war bills; letting a subcommittee delve into the intrigues of R Street.

1942 National Bank Earnings 962 Million

The 5087 national banks of the country had gross earnings of $962,837,000 for the calendar year of 1942, Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano reported yesterday. This was an increase of $37,174,000 over the earnings of the 5123 banks operating in the preceding year.

Heroism of Sergeant Saves B-17 and Crew

By Lowell Bennett
International News Service Staff Writer

London, May 16.—The extraordinary heroism of a Flying Fortress ball-turret gunner—who beat out flames aboard the bomber with his bare hands while administering first-aid and manning two guns in an air battle—was revealed tonight by American headquarters in Britain.

This rare feat of self-ignoring bravery, which is part of a sworn record made by Pilot First Lieut. Lewis Page Johnson, of Crummues, Ky., may win for the gunner, Sergeant Maynard H. Smith, 32, of Cairo, Mich., the highest decoration for valor.

It was solely because of Sergeant Smith's exceptional intrepidity in the face of threatening death that Lieutenant Johnson was able to bring his Fortress back from a raid on St. Nazaire a few days ago literally in a blaze of glory.

Neither Johnson nor his co-pilot, Lieut. Robert T. McMallum, of Omaha, Neb., knew that the mid-section and tail of their bomber had been gutted by fire until after it landed at its base in Britain. They and other members of the Fortress' crew owe their lives to Smith.

Smith's own stirring story was incorporated into the record submitted to headquarters by Lieutenant Johnson.

"We were leaving the flak at St. Nazaire and an FW-190 (Nazi fighter) tailed us when there was a terrific explosion," the gunner said.

The right and the left waist gunners bailed out and Smith then attacked the flames in the radio room with an extinguisher. A few moments later he saw the tail gunner crawling forward from the blazing tail.

The tail gunner had a bullet wound in his back. Smith made him comfortable as possible.

Leaping from one gun to another, Smith momentarily fought off the Focke-Wulf that kept trailing the Fortress.

Then he raced back to the radio room and tossed blazing debris out through holes burned in the bomber's side until he was forced out of the room by fumes.

By that time the Focke-Wulf was again closing in. Smith fired more bursts from the guns on both sides. He then administered again to the wounded tail gunner while battling the flames.

"It was so hot in there that ammunition was exploding all over the place."

In fighting the flames the courageous sergeant used up all the plane's extinguishers. Then he flung drinking water from the crew's water bottles into the blaze. Finally, he hurled himself bodily at the flames, flailing them with his open hands.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Workers' Loyalty Under New Inquiry

This may seem incredible, but the Public Buildings Administration has now joined with a score of other agencies and congressional committees in questioning the loyalty of Federal employes. Employes are investigated before they get into a Federal building and now, apparently, they'll be investigated after they get into the buildings to make sure they don't commit an act of sabotage or carry on subversive activity while they are at work. If any more agencies start investigating Federal workers we'll soon have an investigator for each employe and the detectives will be able to shadow the employes at all times. But then we'll need investigators to check up on the investigators for the current Government policy is to trust no one.

After all, PBA is merely carrying out a law passed by Congress. It's responsible for the Federal buildings, and to keep them from being blown up it has issued an order which will require a new investigation of all employes in the buildings it controls. War agencies are first on its list. Each agency must make a "blanket certification" to PBA that all its employes are loyal. told the check on their employes' In the directive, the agencies were height, weight, social security numbers and nicknames among other things. This sentence in the PBA letter accompanying the directive caused eyebrows to be raised in some quarters: As a matter of information, some Government agencies are employing commercial credit organizations to obtain data for loyalty determination at a cost of $3 per person." If any outfit can determine the loyalty of any group of persons at $3 per person, the age of miracles isn't past. The Ramspeck Committee has been concerned about duplication in making employe investigations. Here's something it should get its teeth into.

Navy Department employes will be delighted to know that the House has knocked out the limitation on the number of employes Navy can hire above $5000. In brief, the House Appropriations Committee frankly admitted it made a mistake. The rider was most unfair. It kept scores of employes at $5000 who had earned, and were entitled to, increases. Navy was the only agency that has been hamstrung by such a rider. . . . Senator Kilgore, speaking for his science mobilization bill, says that the National Inventor's Council has turned over 120,000 ideas to Army Ordnance but only four have been put into effect and only 41 seriously considered.

Office of Price Administration says it isn't necessary to buy an equal amount of sherbert to get some ice cream. "Oh, yeah," say employes at the Pentagon Building, "try to buy some ice cream at one of the milk bars without getting—not 50, but 60 per cent sherbet." If the operators continue the ice cream-sherbet policy, the employes will sic an OPA investigator onto the barmaids. . . . Don Nelson, WPB boss speaking: "A man who comes in here (WPB) has a hard job swimming in the goldfish bowl naked and many of them become misfits when they cannot take hold. It is a problem." He was answering criticism from members of Congress on some of the screwy things that take place within his organization. Nelson admitted frankly that queer things happen, but he believes they are less frequent.

Selective Service here will be cut down from 569 to 501 under its 1944 appropriation . . . War Manpower's training within industry staff will be increased from 39 to 70 and the field force will be doubled . . . WPB has lopped its long-distance phone bill from $30,000 to $21,000 a week. It solved its excessive phone-use problem in some cases by taking phones away from officials . . . A dollar-a-year man costs the Government $3600 a year according to WPB Budget Officer Francis R .Crawley. Per diem and travel make up the difference. WPB has more than 400 dollar-a-year men . . . A conference to bring about a better understanding between Congress and the bureaucrats will be held here this week by the Society for the Advancement of Management.

The House has voted Howard University funds to convert its oil burner to coal . . . Navy has recently made awards of $1500 and $1000 to two employes who came through with excellent suggestions of a confidential nature and therefore can't be revealed . . . The son of OPA Bigwig Clyde Herring is in a German prison camp in Germany. He's spending his time learning languages . . . Marietta Risley of Lend Lease, never sees her paycheck. She uses it to buy war bonds . . . The House Appropriations Committee went into detail on Navy's meritorious promotions, but it found none to criticize . . . Public Health Service is seeking funds to train several thousand additional nurses . . . An editorial in this month's Federal Employe, NFFE publication, points to the action of the House in delaying action on the recently approved overtime pay act as a warning to the Administration to clean up its own house. "On Capitol Hill there is a growing antipathy to inept administrators, to palpably over-staffed emergency agencies, to an orgy of red-tapeism, to obvious confusion and extravagance in the administration of certain agencies."

Rustin Hits Anti-Saloon League Ways

Organization Opens Conference With Demand for 'War Prohibition'

While the national Anti-Saloon League opened its thirty-second annual conference yesterday with a demand for wartime prohibition, a local minister, in his sermon, attacked the league's methods of dealing with the temperance problem.

He was Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and newly elected Washington Federation of Churches' president, who told his flock yesterday morning that while he strongly opposed liquor and favored wartime prohibition, he disagreed with the league's methods in trying to effect such legislation.

Often at Adds

While declining to enlarge upon his sermon remarks, Dr. Rustin told The Post after the service that he and the Anti-Saloon officials had been at odds frequently on the question of temperance methods.

Chief speakers at the Anti-Saloon League conference at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest were the Rev. Sam Morris of San Antonio, Tex., field speaker for the leaguei and Bishop Ralph S. Cushman of the St. Paul (Minnesota) area, league president.

The Texan, in a fiery speech that drew frequent rounds of applause, charged that the Anti-Saloon League's demands for wartime prohibition have fallen upon "deaf ears" on Capitol Hill, and said that the present liquor situation in America "is not pleasing to God and ought not to be pleasing to a red-blooded patriotic American."

Today's Program

Dr. Frank Anderson, Des Moines, Iowa, president of the Iowa Anti-Saloon League, presided at yesterday's sessions.

Today's sessions will open at 3 p. m. when the speakers will be Miss Laura Lindley, research secretary, Anti-Saloon League of America, and Edward B. Dumford, league secretary.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., of Richmond, Va., of the league's administrative committee, speaks at 8 p. m. on "Past, Present and Future."

Boy, 16, Caught After Wild Dash In Stolen Car

A 16-year-old boy in a stolen auto was captured early yesterday after an 80-mile-an-hour chase which ended with the expensive convertible coupe overturning three times.

Driver of the car surrendered to Policemen A. R. Wilson and L. J. Land, Seventh Precinct, who chased him from Georgetown to a point 4 miles into Maryland on Conduit Road. The car skidded on soft shoulders, it was said, causing it to roll over.

The boy, at first believed to be the youthful "speed demon" sought in the hit-run death Tuesday of Cora Frank, 68, was uninjured. He later was identified, police said, as a Georgetown school boy well known to them as a car theft suspect. He had no connection, Wilson and Land said, with the second wild driver who has escaped a score of policemen in the past month.

Held Pending Charges

Last night he was held at the Receiving Home pending the lodging of charges at Juvenile Court. The auto he wrecked was stolen from George C. Vournas of the Westchester Hotel, police said.

In the meantime, no trace was found of the 22-year-old Lorton Reformatory parolee who eluded capture in two breakneck chases with police, Saturday night.

He is wanted for questioning in the death of Miss Frank, and in Maryland, Virginia and Washington for automobile theft. Saturday night he outran both District and Montgomery County authorities in a 4-hour merry-go-round flight.

Shot at 5 Times

The county police shot at him five times in one chase over the East-West Highway but failed to slacken his dizzy speed.

Another time during the night he was pursued by Washington police on New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. Local scout cars, however, proved no match for the high-powered sedan he was driving.

Police believe he has stolen at least four cars in the past two weeks and that he uses a different one each time he decides to "play tag" with the law. Authorities are fearful his crazy driving and daredevil speed will result in death for some innocent party.

Group Works To Get Jobs For Disabled

America's war effort can be intensified by the aid of more than two million disabled civilians, Dr. John A. Kratz, chief of the vocational rehabilitation division of the Federal Office of Education, announced yesterday.

Following a meeting of four regional divisions of the National Rehabilitation Association at the Continental Hotel in Washington, Dr. Kratz, with H. W. Nichols, Frankfort, Ky., secretary of the organization, last night explained the object of the four-day congress now in session.

"We plan to reestablish both in labor and society workers who have become disabled in war work," he said.

"This is no new movement. It was established in 1920 and already in this particular emergency there has been a great deal accomplished which is not generally known."

Under the leadership of Claude M. Andrews, Tallahassee, Fla., the State supervisors of all States except five are present at the congress which will be concluded Tuesday.

Although rahabilitation of service-connected soldier, sailor and marine wounded and disabled was discussed. Nichols said their supervision and aid would be handled by the American Red Cross and the Veterans' Administration.

Placement of partially disabled at the present time is going forward satisfactorily, he said, and with more persons conscious of this potential reservoir, manpower will be greatly increased.

These handicapped, placed in war jobs by the United States Employment Service, are proving their value, he explained.

More than 40,000 persons have been placed in jobs during the first three months of this year and 16,000 have been given Government jobs since the Civil Service Commission waived reservations.

State directors at the Capital for the congress include E. H. Gentry, Alabama; Ashley Ross, Arkansas; Harry Bene, Arizona; H. D. Hicker, California; D. F. Richardson, Colorado; E. P. Chester, Connecticut; C. M. Andrews, Florida; H. C. Corpening, District of Columbia; P. S. Barrett, Georgia; Slater Bartlow, Indiana; H. M. Nichols, Kentucky; Harry Dawdy, Kansas.

And S. W. Hendricks, Louisiana; L. C. Koonz, Maine; Herbert Dallas, Massachusetts; Lief Fredericks, Montana; R. C. Thompson, Maryland; Donald Dabelstein, Minnesota; Paul Kinder, Missouri; Walace Black, New Hampshire; Carroll Thomas, New Mexico; C. M. Bleeker, New Jersey; G. S. Bohlin, New York; Lief Erickson, North Dakota; H. E. Springer, North Carolina; Oscar Paulson Oregon; M. B. Perrin, Ohio; V. C. Scurlock, Oklahoma; W. M. Walter, Pennsylvania; Harry T. Smith, Rhode Island; P. G. Scherer, South Carolina; J. J. Brown, Texas; J. Hank Smith, Tennessee; R. N. Anderson, Virginia; Ray Power, West Virginia.

And W. S. Faulks, Wisconsin; Ed Stiles, Vermont; Milo Means, Idaho; Mrs. Marian Bowen, Nevada; Carl Correvant, Michigan; Ralph Parkhill, Delaware; Willis Grant, Iowa, and Jack Harmon, Utah.

Sessions will continue today and through Tuesday, Nichols said.

Preacher Sees Vice in Capital As Sabotaging Victory Effort

Warning that vice here is helping to "sabotage the war effort," the Rev. Luther J. Holcomb yesterday demanded that District and congressional leaders take immediate steps to tighten District laws.

"When Washington has twice as many cases of soldiers being infected with venereal disease as any city of its size in America, and when juvenile delinquency is mounting alarmingly, it is time for citizens to demand drastic action," he contended.

Speaking at Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest, the preacher blamed lack of civic spirit for much of the crime and vice in the Nation's Capital, and said that churches must help prevent juvenile delinquency by providing social and recreational programs, in addition to caring for the spiritual needs of the young.

Speaking at St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, Brentwood Road Northeast, the Rev. George K. Bowers said in part:

"In these days when rumors run riot, every sensible man must remember that words are weapons that anyone can wield. Speak the truth always, and speak it truthfully!

"An era of wildfire propaganda ought to remind the Christian that idle talk played as big a role in the crucifixion of Christ as all other factors combined.

"A man has two ears and two eyes, but only one tongue—which means that he ought to hear and see twice as much as he talks about."

Transport Future of Planes Discussed in Radio Debate

Although the airplane is destined to become the No. 1 commercial carrier of the future "I venture to predict a synchronized system in which the railroads, truck lines and inland waterways will all play their part," William B. Ziff, a civilian aeronautics authority, said last night over the American Forum of the Air which was broadcast nationally from the Shoreham Hotel.

Concurring with Ziff was Representative Clare Boothe Luce (Republican) of Connecticut, while the opposition was composed of Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission, and J. Carter Fort, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads. Subject for the evening was, "The Airplane's Role in Postwar Transportation."

Ziff gave two of the advantages of air transport as rapid delivery and enormous savings in manpower. "The air carrier represents a smaller capital investment for total mile-loads handled than does any comparable surface carrier," he said.

"The same is true," Ziff added, "in comparison with the ground services. It will be possible to travel from New York to Los Angeles in a luxury airliner in eight to ten hours, at a cost of $40 to $50."

Representative Luce commented that "the things growing airlines will make obsolete are: Present old-fashioned railway equipment and service, present railway rate policies designed to protect the investment in obsolete equipment against airline competition, and policies by Government agencies which tend to stiffle competing forms of transportation."

Admiral Land stated that "wartime development of the larger types of aircraft has emphasized their growing importance. As a result, many predictions concerning the future place of the airplane in the overall scheme of world transportation have been made. Few appear to be founded on sound transportation principles, fewer still on experience.

"Some prophets," Admiral Land continued, "have taken the extreme view that aircraft will supplant railroads and merchant ships. In none of those predictions have I found sound premise or logical conclusion.

"While it is true remarkable progress has been made in development of the heavier types or aircraft, it is equally true modern ships such as the fast, efficient types developed by the Maritime Commission are vastly improved and they will continue to carry the great bulk of our ocean-borne commerce."

Fort declared that "the Nation will need and should use, in its appropriate place, every form of transport. No one of them is best for all purposes. There are things an airplane can do better than a ship or a truck or a train, and other things which each one of them can do better than any other one."

Children's Hospital Seeks Funds for Higher Salaries

Because of increased payrolls necesary to maintain a professional staff of proper standards, Children's Hospital is asking citizens for additional donation pledges for maintenance of services. Twenty-four thousand dollars more will have to be paid in salaries in 1943 than in 1942 if the institution is to serve the public adequately, according to Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent.

In addition to the needs of Washington's increased population, the hospital is being pressed more and more to give aid to families of service men, according to Miss Gibson.

Citizens are asked to pledge amounts as sustaining members of the hospital to supplement funds available from District appropriations, the Community Chest, endowment and fees from private patients. The hospital has 210 beds, but only 27 rooms are for private patients.

District patients and patients certified by the Health Security Administration for which Chest and District funds are used are cared for below cost.

It is expected that District contributions under the District 1944 budget will defray two-thirds of the costs of handling city patients, a somewhat larger proportion of the total cost than had previously been paid.

Optimist Club To Hear Randolph

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia will address the Washington Optimist Club at a luncheon in honor of District government officials tomorrow, at the Mayflower Hotel, 12:30 p. m.

Among the guests will be Commissioner John Russell Young, Engineer Commissioner C. W. Kutz, Police Superintendent Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, and Police Inspector Harvey G. Callahan.

Jewelry Store Robbed

Jewelry valued at $298 was stolen yesterday from a window at a jewelry store, 435 Seventh Street Northwest, by thieves who broke the glass with a brick. Abraham Hockberg, 5231 Chevy Chase Parkway Northwest, owner, reported the loss.

Official Spurns Navy Stripes To Be Private

Because he didn't particularly want to serve his country at war doing office work, Donald S. Dawson, director of personnel for the RFC, last April 1 played a real April fool joke on the Navy.

DAWSON

He rejected a commission as lieutenant, junior grade. Thursday, the 34-year-old executive will report to the United States Army reception center at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., for induction as a private.

"It just appeared to me that I would be more useful as a soldier," Dawson said yesterday.

Dawson is extremely well known and liked by both officials in the Capital and among Government employes.

Aided Government Girl

As chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration special committee for the recent Government Girl campaign, much of the credit for its success is due to his effort.

Son of an El Dorado, Mo., physician, the former RFC official came to Washington from New York in 1933, where he had been associated with an investment banking firm.

With the RFC since his arrival in the Capital Dawson has been Director of Personnel for the past four years. Under the Selective Service Act, he will return to his position following the war.

Studied at Missouri

He was graduated from the University of Missouri with a degree in economics in 1930 and was a member of the senior honor society there. He also had won his letter in track.

Dawson is a member of Beta Theta Pi national college social fraternity. His affairs, he explained, are now in order and he is ready.

"I have no idea where I will be assigned," he said. "I only hope I'll not fall heir to a desk job!"

Piano Quintet Stirs Much Enthusiasm

By Ray C. B. Brown

National Gallery of Art presents the Chamber Music Guild String Quartet (Emanuel Zetlin, Milton Schwartz, George Wargo and Marcel Ancher) on Sunday night. Assisting artist, Rudolf Hildemann. Program: Piano Quintet in F minor (Franck), Gavotte (Pochon), Andante Cantabile from Quartet in D major (Chaikovski), Scherzo from Quartet in E minor (Mendelssohn).

Auditors not only filled all available space in the east garden court of the National Gallery of Art but also hearkened from adjoining rooms last evening when the Chamber Music Guild String Quartet made its second appearance there. Nothing has been more thoroughly disproved than the fallacy that only popular and entertaining music will draw a crowd. The major work performed on this occasion was Cesar Franck's noble piano quintet, which has never been listed among the musical best-sellers, yet it was received with as much interest and enthusiasm as would have been, let us say, Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

BROWN

Rudolf Hildemann, who recently became a local resident, was the capable exponent of the piano part in this exalted and spiritually eloquent work, which was given an impassioned and convincing reading. In the personnel of the quartet one noted a change, Milton Schwartz having taken the place of Stanley Weiner, who was recently inducted into the Army. The substitution was a wise choice on the part of Marcel Ancher, founder of the Guild, for Mr. Schwartz is an experienced quartet player of artistic caliber.

The quartet dispensed with the assistance of the piano in the second part of the concert which was concerned with a gavotte by Alfred Pochon, of Flonzaley Quartet fame, and movements from quartets by Chaikovski and Mendelssohn.

Yesterday afternoon Conrad Bernier, organist at Catholic University, played an unusual recital in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. His scholarly program was historical in intention and chronological in order, the birth years of the composers descending from 1510 to 1685.

He began with a Canzona by Andrea Gabrieli, and continued with Jan Sweelinck's Fantasia in Echo Style, Jean Titelouze's Ave Maria Stella, John Bull's Vexilla Regis Prodeunt, Girolamo Frescobaldi's Toccato for the Elevation, and Nicolas Le Begue's The Bells. A second group contained pieces by Louis Couperin and Francois Couperin le Grand, and a Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne by Dietrich Buxtehude. At the end he played Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor.

Vocal interludes were provided by students from the chant class of the music department, who sang two groups of liturgical excerpts. Their well-trained singing was entirely in the Gregorian modes, four of which were exemplified in their selections.

In Phillips Memorial Gallery yesterday afternoon Nadia Boulanger was an informal and engaging lecturer on the subject, "An Hour in the Vernal Kingdom of Mozart," to one of the largest audiences that has gathered there for many a Sunday. Her remarks were devoted mainly to the subtleties of Mozart's melodies, rhythms and modulations in their relation to emotional expression. She was assisted with illustration by Vera Bryner and Juanita Carter, sopranos, who sang arias and duets from several operas.

Stockvis-Watson Team Routs Tourney's Mixed-Pair Field

By Marian H. Barre

Post Bridge Editor

Mrs. A. P. Stockvis of Arlington, Va., and Capt. Lewis R. Watson, jr., Washington, completely routed the mixed pair field in the Old Dominion Bridge Tournament at Wardman Park Hotel, winning the title with a 30-point lead over Mrs. Lester Gibson and Dr. C. C. McDonnell. The game was played Saturday night, scores becoming official yesterday noon. Trophy for the event is the Stockvis Cup, named in honor of Mrs. Stockvis' husband, who formerly directed this tournament.

It was Mrs. Stockvis' third win on the trophy. On the other occasions her partner was Alvin Roth, the local lad who is not America's No. 1 player. Slated to play yesterday, Roth was unavoidably detained. It would have been his first return home since his capture of the three great national bridge classics. Pinch-hitting for Roth, newly-promoted Captain Watson did well by his partner.

Runners-up Mrs. Gibson and McDonnell played in a comparatively recent partnership that promises much in the future. Their match point total was 270, as compared to an even 300 for the winners. Mrs. Henry Wolfe and Leroy Thurtell finished third with 267½ points; fourth place went to the current northern Virginia mixed pair champions, Mrs. D. H. Mott and V. D. Nickolson, scoring 261½. Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, who won the Dominion title in 1941, were fifth-ranking paid with 258½, and Mrs. T. M. Boyle and Sergt. Maj. Samuel Groves were sixth on the honor roll with 257.

The ranking open pair championship was the last event on the tournament program. It was held in two rounds yesterday, Mrs. J. R. Belt, Washington, and Mrs. Frederick Eberson of Pittsburgh, playing in defense of their 1942 title. After the matinee session, which was run as an elimination, the following pairs qualified for the finals with top carry-overs: Alfred Stidham and Robert Thurrell, 144; J. G. Stone and William Cheeks, 133½; Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, 124½; Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Tom Wallace, 122½; Mrs. J. E. Solline and Dr. Arthur Salasky, 121½. The defending champions qualified with 117 points.

46 Soldiers Hailed Here As Citizens

Nationalities of World Represented At 'I Am American Day' Ceremonies

Forty-six soldiers stationed at Fort Belvoir, representing almost every nationality on the face of the earth, who only last Friday became United States citizens, were congratulated last night by leading Washingtonians at the "I Am an American Day" celebration in the departmental auditorium.

Names like Weimer, Halaris, Irving and Graham filled the list, and with this assembly of nationalities were gathered a dozen or so religions.

Speaking to the soldiers, Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court, said:

"We are pleased you have chosen America to be your mother country, and that you have donned her uniform to fight in her defense. She is worthy of your devotion, and since you have shown devotion to her in such definite form, we extend you an unusually hearty welcome as fellow citizens."

Many New Voters

Charles Fahy, Solicitor General of the United States, also spoke. Said Fahy:

"During the past year the United States has enlarged its voting body by some 2,750,000 persons. . . . Of these 2,750,000 new voters, 2,407,000 are Americans by choice." In addition, 255,000 persons who were not born here and who previously had owed no allegiance to our Government, have joined our citizenry.

"In addition to the group I have mentioned," Fahy commented, "we have also accepted as new citizens within the past year some 15,000 members of the armed forces who were non-citizens. They have attained full status by virtue of their service, in accordance with provisions of the Second War Powers Act. None of us harbors doubt of the eligibility of these fighting men. They are now fulfilling the highest obligation of American citizenship. They are meeting that obligation as it needs to be met—with all they have."

The program was under the direction of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education.

Church Service Flag

The Italian Baptist congregation at 1200 Kirby Street Northwest dedicated a service flag for 20 boys in the armed forces, as a highlight of the "I Am an American Day" celebration.

The flag was a gift of Mrs. Maria Marraffa of 5435 Forty-first Street Northwest, with four sons and a son-in-law in the service. A widow, she became an American citizen on May 4 with Mrs. Pasquale Vasco of 1330 G Street Northeast, also of the congregation, and whose son, Corpl. Tech. Hiram Vasco, was among the engineers who helped clear Nazi mines from the road leading to Gafsa in the battle for Tunisia.

Mrs. Marraffa's sons are Russell F., private, first class; Thomas A., corporal technician; Orlando, private, all United States Army, and Ernest D. Marraffa, seaman, second class. Army Pvt. Howard I. Wittenmyer is the son in law of Mrs. Marraff's late husband, Donato was cofounder and deacon of the Italian Baptist Church.

Members of the Greek Orthodox Church of Sts. Constantine and Helen, Sixth and C Street Southwest, sent a congratulatory telegram to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The message reminded the general that the congregation, at a solemn mass and doxology yesterday, "prayed with deep emotion and feeling that God guides you always to complete your glorious victories against the forces of darkness which in such historical and matchless manner you have inaugurated."

The telegram was signed by the Rev. Thomas Daniels, pastor, and James Callas, president of the congregation.

Senator Warren W. Barbour (Republican) of New Jersey, was principal speaker at a mass meeting under auspices of the Civil Liberties Department of Negro Elks last night, at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, incident to "I Am an American Day." Rufus G. Byars was master of ceremonies.

Introduced by Perry W. Howard, Senator Barbour, author of the Senate Civil Liberties Bill for the District of Columbia, which was introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative William A. Rowan (Democrat), of Illinois, spoke of his interest in measures of tolerance and freedom.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Linasay

More Life to the Years

A Nation of oldsters! That's what we are headed for if present trends in population continue. Life expectancy at birth has increased from about 47 to 63 in the last 40 years. The rise in the percentage of elderly persons has sharply gone upward in the last decade.

To some this future picture is depressing. They see a large part of the population hobbling about on canes or riding in wheel chairs. They see all other citizens burdened with taxes to support them. They see the old eating on the young physically, mentally, spiritually.

Yet this need not be the picture. We might have a Nation boasting its asset of vigorous, self-reliant, older citizens who are happily contributing the skill, experience and wisdom the years have brought them. That is where geriatrics, the care of the aging and the aged, comes in. This is a field of medical practice that is receiving increasing attention as war has brought demands upon older persons and as postwar readjustment threatens to heighten their economic problems.

'Age Bloc' May Peril Nation

Dr. Edward J. Stieglitz, consultant in geronology (the science of aging) at the National Institute of Health, believes it is high time the Nation woke up its age problem. If not, he points out, there will develop in time an "age bloc" not only living off the rest of the population, but furnishing a dangerous source of political power that may be exploited by demagogues with fantastic schemes.

"The present situation is wholly without precedent," he said. "Never before in the history of mankind has a like problem presented itself; there are no marked trails to follow." Also, Dr. Stieglitz feels the Nation should not waste the wisdom and skill of the older population it has developed through its long efforts to save babies and guard the health of childhood. "We prepare the child to become an adult," he said, "but give no attention to preparing the adult for his role in later life. Yet now in wartime older workers must perform the tasks for which special skills are necessary; older men must carry the responsibility of government, industry and of running the war, and older leaders must make the peace and reorganize the world."

Not mere longevity is the aim of geriatrics, Dr. Stieglitz emphasizes. Longevity without health he sees as a national debit. Rather he would add "more depth and breadth" to the years that are lived. Neither would geriatrics arrest aging. Indeed it could not. Aging is a part of living. It starts with conception and continues throughout life. But its effects can be modified. Its social and economic handicaps can be lessened.

Don't Coddle Age, Make It Useful

By adding "more life to the years" the independence and usefulness of older persons can be prolonged—a service they need more than "protection." Arbitrary ages of retirement or of employment, Dr. Stieglitz terms "utterly ridiculous." Aging varies greatly in people and physiologic age does not parallel chronologic age. "Some persons are valuable in business and industry at 65 and well beyond," said the physician. "Others are dead from the neck up—and down—at 45. The problem of measuring physiologic age has not yet been solved. A vast amount of work must be done upon it. However, the experienced physician does arrive at a general impression of it that we call clinical judgment. Crude as such impressions are, they are far more valid than the arbitrary rules of retirement based on chronologic age alone."

But granting this pressing old-age problem, what is the individual to do about it? What steps can he—or she—take to add more life to the years?"

As to "she," Dr. Stieglitz thinks it especially important that women begin to prepare early for the psychic pitfalls that await their middle and later years. These come largely from not having enough to do. Men, he points out, are usually in the peak of their productivity between 40 and 60, a time when many women are just passing out of theirs. Their children are grown and the depressive feeling of uselessness, chief mental enemy of the elderly, is beginning to descend on them. This is when they need a vocation, interest or hobby that will keep them busy, give them a sense of accomplishment, a purpose in living. In fact, no one man or woman can make a better mental preparation for later life, Dr. Stieglitz emphasizes, than to be equipped to "stay busy doing something." "When the one-track person retires," he said, "it is equivalent to having his death certificate signed."

Pin-Up Cottons

By Jeanne Contini

Proceeding on the premise that cotton takes the cake for summer in our town, we've set ourself the job of ferreting out the best cottons available from the banks of the Potomac to the knolls of Chevy Chase. It doesn't require second sight to perceive that when a given commodity is so much in demand, it barely has time to climb on to a hanger before it's bought. We think the best service we can perform is post the good ones as we find them.

Our latest discoveries are more or less just "wonderful dresses." They don't pretend to double as bathing suits at the buzz of a zipper . . . no false bottoms or chemical miracles. They are made of the common garden American plant that all the songs are written about. These happen to be of especially fine quality cloth, cut with some imagination and smoothly tailored.

GINGHAM SUIT: The answer for size elevens who prefer not to look like charming illustrations for Mother Goose. It does all the right things for the lines of an adult junior figure and has a made-to-order look about the cut-away pockets. Red or green gingham that feels like the imported English variety . . . about $18.

SHIRTING DRESS: A dress that has the neat look of a shirtwaist but doesn't look like a "golf" dress. While it can hold its own in the country with the best of 'em, it can also go to lunch at the Mayflower without turning a button. Simply add dark accessories and you're ready. You can tell at a touch that the fabric will launder perfectly. White with rose, blue, or brown stripes . . . about $8.

For information, call National 4200, Extension 324.

All breakfasts should be nutritious. To rate as "good," a breakfast should score on the following points: appetite appeal, real nourishment, the right proportions of energy-building, mineral and vitamin-rich foods to carry one through until the next meal. It should also be served in an attractive way.

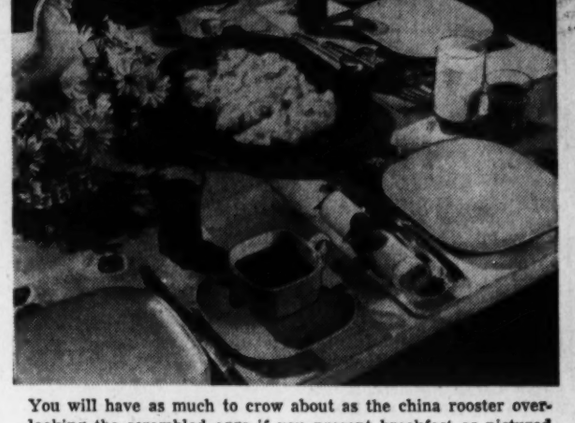
As a suggestion here is a menu which includes flavor, appeal and good nutrition. You can go as far with the attractive presentation and cheerfulness as you please.

Breakfast Menu

Chilled Prune Juice
Scrambled Eggs Sausages
Whole Wheat Popovers
Strawberry Jam
Coffee Milk

WHOLE WHEAT POPOVERS

Sift ½ cup bread flour with ½ teaspoon salt. Stir in ½ cup whole wheat flour. Add 2 teaspoons melted butter or margarine to 2 slightly beaten eggs. Next add 1 cup milk and stir into the first mixture. Beat with a rotary beater for about 1 minute or until smooth. Fill buttered custard cups about one-third full with the mixture and bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for about 20 minutes. Reduce the heat to moderate, 350 degrees, and bake for about 15 to 20 minutes longer, or until firm. This recipe makes eight popovers.



You will have as much to crow about as the china rooster overlooking the scrambled eggs if you present breakfast as pictured here. Cook the scrambled eggs gently over very low heat. Stir up the whole wheat popovers and brew coffee with as much attention as you make the eggs

Oven-popped rice can be made into a delightful breakfast omelet. If you are looking for a dish to vary the morning's meal, the following recipe will provide sturdy nutrition.

Oven-popped rice can be more than a crunchy breakfast dish. It can be used to make a nutritious main dish when combined with other foods. Here is a recipe in which it is used in an omelet:

OVEN-POPPED RICE OMELET

Dice 4 slices bacon and cook in skillet until crisp. Drain off fat. Mix 1 tablespoon bacon fat with 1 cup oven-popped rice cereal. Beat 6 egg yolks well. Add ¼ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Beat 6 egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold into yolks with bacon and oven-popped rice cereal. Put 1 tablespoon bacon fat in skillet. Turn egg mixture into skillet and cook over low heat until lightly browned underneath. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees F. about 10 minutes or until omelet is dry on top. Grease lightly through center and fold; serve immediately. Yield: 6-8 servings.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

In the cramped quarters in which many families are compelled to live it is certain that children have a difficult time playing and much interference with their sleeping habits.

Fathers may be sleeping in daytime, thus setting up a prohibition against active noisy play. Parents and children may have to sleep in the same room, thus making it impossible to give the child the nap, or it may disturb the child's sleep when the parents go to bed.

This has, from the experience of this department, created innumerable problems of management which tax the resources of the mothers.

One of these has to do with a child who always has been a poor sleeper. Mrs. C. J. writes: "As an infant she had to be given sleeping medicines frequently to induce sleep. She seemed to outgrow her sleeplessness as she became more active. However, lately, now past 2, she has taken to waking up two or three hours after she goes to bed and apparently is refreshed. Sometimes it takes her three hours to fall asleep again.

"We used to try to settle her down, now we take her to the bathroom, put her back in bed and let her cry. She keeps this up until we go to bed. Unfortunately, we have to have her cot in our bedroom."

There may be some personal reason why she can't sleep all night. One of these may have to do with the afternoon nap, which may be too long. If she plays actively all morning she should have a rest period of at least an hour. But many a child of this age who has always been satisfied with fewer hours of sleep cannot take an afternoon nap and then go to bed early and sleep all night.

Relative to the sleeping quarters, I have made the suggestion to several mothers living in three-room apartments that the living room be made the sleeping room for the parents and the bedroom become the sleeping as well as playing quarters of the child.

It seems entirely artificial to set aside a room for only one use when a child's need for some place to play and for a room alone seems so acute.

If this child were put to sleep alone in her own room it would be improbable that she would lie awake waiting for you to come to bed. It is worth a trial, even if your bed has to be moved into a living room.

Our leaflet, "Sleeping Habits," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

One Summer's Romance

BY RITA HANSEN

CHAPTER XIII

It was about a week after Slade's funeral that Johnny decided to send the play to New York for the final typing and binding. "It's all finished now until the first rehearsal when we start tearing it up," he said on the way home from Feather River.

"I suppose you'll be going back to New York right away," Lisa said regretfully.

He said, "I have to go back, much as I hate to. Sometimes I get just about all I can take of New York, all this fighting and squabbling over casts and sets and expenses and those murderous first nights. And nine times in ten the play closes in a week and there's six months of blood, sweat and tears for nothing!"

"But the tenth time you get a hit?"

"Yeah," he said gloomily, "Maybe! Listen, Lisa, the other night—when I told you that you could play the girl in the show—I know it was bad timing, but I meant it. I've just got a hunch you could do it."

She felt a deep embarrassment, remembering the way she had gone to pieces that night. "Goodness, Johnny, I couldn't. I've never even seen a real professional play, let alone acted in one."

"But don't you see, that's the perfect part about this. Jenne is everything that's naive, unformed—the more awkward and amateurish you'd be in some roles, the better you'd be as Jenne."

"But I just couldn't get up on a stage and . . . and act! I wouldn't know what to do!"

He pulled up in front of the house and turned round to face her. "My darling little hillbilly . . . I know a director in New York who can teach anybody all they need to know about the technical end of it in four weeks. He could give you just enough . . . it's not a big part although it's the whole play. You're not on stage very much."

Symie had been sitting on the porch, waiting for Johnny. He got up and came waddling out to the car. "Julie wired," he said, "from New York. She's anxious about you, Johnny boy . . . and the play."

"Nuts," Johnny said. "This isn't for Julie. I don't want an actress like every other actress in New York. Symie, what do you think about getting Miles Wood to direct Lisa here in the part?"

Symie didn't think much of it. "Johnny, we discussed all sides of the question, I thought. Don't be sentimental . . . Miss Alden is a nice girl, a beautiful girl . . . but as an actress . . . No!"

It made Lisa angry to be discussed as though she weren't around. It made her reckless too. "How do you know I'm not an actress?" she said definantly.

Johnny said, "Atta girl!" but symie shook his head sadly, "Ideas you're giving her now! Johnny, you're a great guy for wild ideas, but believe me this time . . ."

Lisa looked at Johnny and suddenly knew what she was going to say. She had been miserable, knowing that he was going away, and now, miraculously, here was a way that she could go with him. And maybe, maybe she could act! There isn't anybody who doesn't have a secret, delightful little conviction that he could be an actor if he had the chance. After all, everybody had to start sometime! Even girls like Julie Brent weren't always actresses! She said, "If you think I can do it, Johnny, perhaps I can."

Symie was disgusted with the whole thing, but Lisa didn't care. She was sure of just one thing: that she wanted to be with Johnny, and leaving the house and the valley didn't matter now. She closed the house and gave Effie the chickens and garden to take care of. Poor Effie was lost without the labor of caring for Slade. She had never had any leisure before and now she didn't know what to do with it. Lisa felt bad about saying goodby to her. In the car, she said to Johnny, "Slade told me once that when people stopped fighting for something, when they gave up, they were as good as dead. Poor Effie had given up entirely. She didn't have anything to fight for, except Slade's health, and now he's gone. I hope I never give up like that."

"You won't," he said. "People like you don't. Only why did you stop fighting for your boy friend? He wasn't even around to say goodby, was he?"

"No," she said seriously. "I guess Mark and I have said goodby already."

"And doesn't it matter?" he prodded. "Don't you want to fight that?"

"I don't think so," she answered him. "I wouldn't let him go if it really mattered. Besides," she laughed, "I've got a job to work on. If I'm to become the hillbilly prodigy of Broadway, I've got work to do!"

"Don't be cynical!" he scolded. Remember, you're the sweet little country girl. I don't want you to change."

Symie sat silently in the back seat. He had given up.

OCD Appeals For Volunteers

An urgent appeal for assistance issues from the office of Civilian Defense. Both skilled and unskilled office workers are needed. Register immediately if you can aid for even a few hours of the day or evening.

Typists, clerical workers including file clerks and registrars, stenographers and statisticians are needed in every corner of the Nation's Capital—in hospitals, in Juvenile Court, in the D. C. Health Bureau, the OCD office, at the ration boards, boys clubs and the settlement houses (nursery schools for war workers).

For example, the Home Hospitality Group is one needing help. Its function is to register war workers and service men who wish to be entertained in private homes, and the families who are anxious to have them as guests. It is through the efforts of this agency that men from home may enter the warmth of the home atmosphere.

Register during the week, Monday through Friday, from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. at the office of Civilian Defense, 2324 F Street or Monday through Friday, 10 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. and Saturday morning at the Booth, 1321 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Walter S. DeLany—

Readiness Chief Recently Back From the Pacific

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Friday.

By Patricia Grady

Though the tan from his recent Pacific command is fading a bit, Rear Admiral Walter Stanley DeLany has the air of a man who has just come from a battle deck.

"We get our men spitting on their hands," is the way this tall, gray-haired Admiral explains his job as Assistant Chief of Staff for Readiness to the Commander in Chief of the Fleet. "We see that the people who are supposed to do things, do things."

Admiral DeLany has a flair for making the complicated sound simple. He's the man who is responsible for the coordination and supervision of personnel training and maintenance of equipment. He has far-reaching and complex duties, but he'd much rather talk about baseball.

This rugged-featured, deep-voiced officer came back from his tour at sea a short time ago filled with admiration for our much-maligned sea-going reserve officers. "Those boys are rarin' to go," he comments. "They have so much enthusiasm and are so anxious to get into the thick of it that all they need is a little leadership and a little time and they find their own niche on shipboard. Their eagerness and youth make them extremely adaptable. They're like putty and can be molded to fit any need."

Humor Is Saving Grace

The currently spotlighted problem of the neuroses of men under battle strain hasn't yet confronted Admiral DeLaney to any great extent. "Of course, the men at sea are not under the long-time day in and day out strain of the men on Gaudalcanal," he points out. "Our problem is rather one of monotony, but shipboard humor is the saving grace. There are always incidents that give the men something to talk about and something to laugh about. And as soon as the novelty of one thing has worn off something else turns up."

ADMIRAL DeLANY

Admiral DeLany has a direct approach to problems, prefers the telephone to pounds of memoranda. He would rather answer questions than "just talk for the record," and his replies are quick and forceful. He has an honest and contagious laugh, doesn't take himself very seriously, uses his cigarette as a converstional baton.

The admiral's plan for an ideal workday is to be at his desk from noon to midnight, but he's resigned to his early morning rising. He hates to get up at dawn and sees no reason to turn in until the wee sma' hours. "Whodunits" and historical novels are his favorite literary pastimes and swimming is his greatest athletic enthusiasm.

When it comes to competitive games, Admiral DeLany is strictly a spectator portsman.

Prefers Telephone To Pounds of Memoranda

His love for hot dogs, sun and soda pop puts baseball high on his list of favorites. His other tours in the Capital have made him a vocal Senator-rooter but he admits that he "can even get enthusiastic about the Philadelphia Athletics."

Son at Annapolis

Admiral and Mrs. DeLany have a house on Morrison Street, where Mrs. DeLany keeps busy with household duties and various Red Cross and benefit activities. Their one daughter is married to a Navy man, and their son, Walter, jr., is following his father's footsteps at Annapolis. He'll graduate from the academy next year.

Born in Reading, Pa., Admiral DeLany graduated from high school there before entering the academy in 1908. His first duty was in the Minnesota and then the Montana. He reported to a shipbuilding company in Massachusetts in 1915, where the Nevada was fitting out and joined her when she was commissioned the next spring.

Served at Pearl Harbor

He assisted in fitting out the Craven and served as her executive officer after she was commissioned. In 1919, he took command of the Paulding before reporting to the Navy Recruiting Station in Albany, N. Y. Following the war he had duty in the Argonne, the Lamson, and as Squadron Gunnery Officer, Destroyer Squadron Nine, Scouting Fleet. After three years at the Bureau of Navigation in Washington he again went to sea, then returned to the Capital to a desk in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Following sea duty and a tour at the Naval Academy, Admiral DeLany became chief of staff and aide on the staff of the Commander, Cruisers, Battle Force, in 1939. Two years later he was made Assistant Chief of Staff of the Pacific Fleet. After war broke out he assumed a command at sea, and returned to Washington a few months ago.

Parties Stud Capital Calendar

A series of informal parties studded the Capital calendar yesterday afternoon in a brief flashback to the daily doing of the days before the war.

Guest of honor at her husband's party, as well as hostess, was Mrs. Paul Raigorodsky, who arrived in Washington from their home in Kerrville, Tex., just the middle of last week. Mr. Raigorodsky, who has taken the Igor Cassini home in Greorgetown here, is with the Petroleum Administration.

While he is busy with the war effort in Washington, Mrs. Raigorodsky has been keeping the ranch in humming order back in Texas and is in town for a month's vacation from ranching. While she is in the East she will go on to the Willard School in Troy, N. Y., to collect their oldest daughter, Paula, at the end of the school term and will also stop off for their other daughter, Lada, at Oak Grove in Vassalboro, Me. She will take the children back to the ranch in Texas with her for the summer.

Still another party on yesterday's calendar was the one given by former Representative and Mrs. Joseph Edward Casey at their home on Indian Lane. Though the "at home" (one in a series) was not planned in honor of any one, Mrs. Casey's mother, Mrs. Charles Howard Dudley of Hanover, N. H., arrived in town just in time for the event and was the hit of the afternoon, greeting old friends. Mrs. Dudley will be here for four days.

Still another party, which, like the others mentioned, numbered a great many guests from official and diplomatic circles, was the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Allingham Burks Summers, from 5 to 7:30, at their home on Linnean Avenue.

Louise Langdon To Be Bride of Cadet D. C. Biggs

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Langdon of Weslesly Hills, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Langdon to Cadet David C. Biggs, United States Navy Air Corps.

Miss Langdon spent many years of her childhood in foreign countries, chiefly in the Far East, where her father served in United States missions and consulates. She received her education at the American School at Peking, China, at the Low-Heywood School at Stamford, Conn., and graduates this June from Wellesley College. Mr. Biggs is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David C. Biggs of St. Louis, Mo. He attended the St. Louis Country Day School, the Hun School at Princeton, N. J., and graduated from Dartmouth College in 1942. He is now an aviation cadet in the Naval Air Corps at Corpus Christi, Tex.

Mr. Biggs and Miss Langdon will be married this summer in Washington,

OUT OF MY MIND

By Katherine Brush

If Men Had Their Way About It—

I gather that if men had their way about it, there would be living mannequins in shop windows, instead of plastic dummies; and there would be bargirls in all bars, instead of waiters. Women would all have daffodil hair, which they would wear in very long bobs, a little wavy at the ends. They would never, NEVER comb it in public, however. They would always go hatless in summer—and blow beautifully in the wind—and any hats they wore in the wintertime would be large and romantic, never little and silly. But regardless of how large a lady's hat was, it would never flip and flop, and never have to be clutched with the hand, not even in a hurricane.

Daytime skirts would always be short, if men had their way—but not too short—and evening skirts, though long and sinuous and trailing, would be split to the knee. Stockings would be black and sheer, and the seams would be straight as plummet lines. Feminine shoes would always be dainty, and amusingly small, and very high-heeled; and yet at the same time women would always be able to trudge for miles in these shoes, if necessary—and this without tiring, and without halting, and above all without MINCING. Women would never be cold at football games, because they would wear highly sensible clothing; but the minute the game was over they would be able, by some sudden alchemy, to transform their tweeds and woolies into silks, and their galoshes into slippers.

Make-up would never LOOK like make-up, if men had their way about it; and it would never have to be replenished under any circumstances. The fingernails of ladies would be short and pink, not long and red. Girdles would be abolished, and those who need them would trim down—or else stay out of sight. Congress would pass a law forbidding women ever to wear slacks, except perhaps in war factories. Bathing suits wouldn't even be sold to any dame larger than a size 16.

Lap dogs would be exterminated, if men ruled the universe; and no one would ever put anything in a different place from where THEY would have put it; and all meals would consist of oysters, steak, mashed patatoes with g r a v y, a n d pie. There wouldn't be any goblets with stems; or any doilies, big or little; or any such nonsense as cocktail napkins; or any fancy salads. And speaking of eating, there would never be any women in the restaurants where men like to lunch—unless, of course, they themselves chanced to be lunching with a woman. Head waiters would always greet a man by his right name; and bartenders from coast to coast would know just how he likes his Scotch old-fashioned.

If it were really a man's world, and if men had everything to suit themselves, the average wife would combine the best features of Greer Garson (as Mrs. Miniver) and Gypsy Rose Lee (as Gypsy Rose Lee)—together with those of a Conover model, a comparison shopper, a blue-ribbon cook, a certified public accountant, an angel from heaven, and the man's own mother.

Women would never be cleverer or wittier than men, or more intelligent; and above all they would never be more successful in business. As a matter of fact, it's extremely doubtful whether woman would be in business at all, if men had their way about it. They are changeless creatures, men. Despite all the evidence to the contrary, they still believe in their stubborn hearts that woman's place is in the home—except for an hour a day at the Red Cross.

French Relief Societies to Hold Spring Sale

Mrs. Joseph Clark Baldwin, wife of Representative Baldwin of New York, is again opening her home at 3525 Woodley Road for the spring sale of the Committee for French-American Wives and the Washington Chapter of the Coordinating Council of French Relief Societies tomorrow and Wednesday, May 18 and 19.

The attic of the Baldwin house was turned into a sewing room for French-American wives almost two years ago and they have been sewing and knitting all last winter to prepare for this spring sale of table linen, children's knitted wear, gay sun suits and organdie pinafores with dainty frills. French books, lingerie and other attractive gifts will be displayed.

Press Women to Have Fashion Show

The weekly luncheon tomorrow of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel at 1 o'clock will feature a style show put on by the editors of Mlle. magazine under the direction of Betsy Talbot Blackwell. The show will stress fashions for working women in a Washington wartime summer.

There will also be a beauty talk by Mala Rubenstein, and the day's events will wind up with a satirical take-off on news women reporters and their costumes by five members of the club.

The "pink and blue party girl" will be played by Hope Ridings Miller; "the synthetic glamour girl," by Helen Vogt; "The Unfinished Symphony," by May Craig; "the plain little mouse," by Margaret Kernodle, and "the overdressed Christmas tree" will be represented by Virgila Stephens.

Navy Officer Weds Kin of Churchill

London, May 16 (AP).—A United States Navy officer became the third American to marry into the family of Prime Minister Churchill when Lieut. Edwin F. Russell, Naval Reserve, wedded Lady Sarah Churchill, 21, oldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, yesterday.

The ceremony was held in the fashionable St. Margaret's Church in the shadows of Westminster Abbey, but because of wartime restrictions it was a simple one. The Right Rev. Kenneth E. Kirk, Bishop of Oxford, pronounced the vows.

Lieutenant Russell, who was associate publisher of the Newark (N. J.) Star-Ledger, joined the British Royal Navy in 1941 and was transferred to the United States Naval Reserve last month.

Blue-eyed, brown-haired Lady Sarah, a distant relative of Mr. Churchill, is the first woman in her family to marry an American. Other Americans in the Churchill family were women. Lady Sarah's grandmother is the former Consuelo Vanderbilt.

Following the ceremony, a small reception was held at the Belgrave Square home of Henry Channon, Chicago-born member of Parliament.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough reside at the family home, Blenheim Palace. Lady Sarah, who has been working on a war job, has been living in London.

St. Margaret's Church dates from the fifteenth century. Until 1858 it was attended by the House of Commons in state four times a year. It still is the official church of Commons. In 1916 it was created a parish church for dominions beyond the sea. Sir Walter Raleigh is buried there.

Miss Betty Ann Mills Shows Portraits at Tea

Mrs. Helen Whitehead Ballinger was hostess at tea yesterday from 5 to 7 in the studio of Miss Betty Ann Mills, 1708 S Street when a number of pastels and oils which Mills has completed since coming to Washington will be exhibited.

Among the portraits to be shown is a pastel of Miss Barbara Caldwell, daughter of Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who will graduate from the Madeira School next month. The group also includes a portrait of Veazey Rainwater, jr., of Atlanta and Texas, who is in Washington at present with the Dies Committee.

Wednesday Is Unofficially Known as Red Cross Day

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

Try to find a Silver Spring housewife at home on Wednesdays and you'll chalk it up as an impossibility. Reason its the time designated, unofficially, as Red Cross day; from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. and from 7 until 9:30 p. m.

For many months an average of 109 women have been making surgical dressings under the leadership of Mrs. William Homer Carroll, chairman of the unit in charge of that work. The parish hall of the Woodside Methodist Church on Georgia Avenue, a convenient locality for all residents, is turned over completely for use of this worthy project.

Harris & Ewing

MRS. E. J. GREENWALD

Simultaneously two other services of the Silver Spring branch, the canteen corps and the nutrition class take advantage of tying in their work the same day and place to gain experience and practice. Two units of the canteen corps of which Mrs. Edward S. Cassedy and Mrs. Paul Baker are chairmen alternate months in serving luncheon to the surgical dressing workers and students of nutrition classes which meet in another part of the building. Mrs. Richard McClure, canteen corps chairman for the entire area is always on duty supervising the chores of 10 women a week in preparing luncheon.

Women ranging in age from 20 to 80 years turn out regularly to make various types of surgical dressings. For those who cannot attend during the day a special class is held on Wednesday nights.

Class Has Expanded Rapidly

Mrs. Carroll, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Carroll, U. S. Coast Guard, has every reason to believe there's no equal to her faithful workers. Since its formation in 1940 the class has moved twice due to its expansion first meeting in the Silver Spring library and then in the Grace Episcopal Church hall.

Interest in the group gained such momentum in the last year that it is now acclaimed by Montgomery County Red Cross headquarters as "the largest class turning out the finest work in the entire county." That's part of a compliment paid the class by Mrs. Harry Milburn, county chairman of surgical dressings when she stated "I am very proud of them."

A glance at the records kept by Mrs. Carroll and her two assisting chairmen, Mrs. J. O. Totten and Mrs. Margaret Wilson will back up the excellent rating of the class.

Since January 1 through May 1 an average of 109 workers weekly put in 5546 hours making 83,695 dressings. The day time group turns out more than 7000 dressings a week. Average attendance of the night class is 32.

Not content to keep this record, Mrs. Carroll states she can still use more volunteers. No woman need stay the full schedule of the class but she may give as many hours as possible. The majority of women, however, stay through luncheon. When National Red Cross issued an appeal for more dressings in March the time of the day group was extended two hours in the afternoon.

Serve Simple, Nutritious Lunches

But back to the hard working canteen corps. Theirs is a difficult job especially when it takes two women four hours to market for the food like it did Mrs. S. G. Spear and Mrs. Philip W. Root, whose husband, Lieut. Col. Root, is somewhere in England, last Tuesday. With warmer weather here the corps has changed its menu of casserole dishes to summer recipes.

Timed to the dot luncheon is served promptly at 12 o'clock with a preparation period of two hours for at least 100 plates. All menus are based on nutritious foods thus carrying out what the canteen corps learned in their nutrition course which they are required to take.

A different woman is appointed each week to plan the luncheon. No profit is made with all luncheons served at 25 cents per worker.

Not only does Mrs. Carroll give up all Wednesdays but bookkeeping and a file system kept by her and Mrs. William Maben give them plenty of homework.

Following the footsteps of their father Don M. Carroll is also with the Coast Guard and when Homer, jr., graduates in June from Montgomery Blair High School he too will enter the Coast Guard.

E. J. Greenwalds Honeymooning in Williamsburg, Va.

Now on their honeymoon in Williamsburg, Va., are Mr. and Mrs. Emil J. Greenwald, whose wedding took place in Washington on Saturday.

The former Miss Eleanor Neighbors and Mr. Greenwald were married at a 10 o'clock morning ceremony at Sacred Heart Church, with the Rev. Ronald J. Fannon officiating.

Given in marriage by Marshall Trippe, the bride wore a gown of light blue with white accessories and carried a white prayer book to which were pinned white orchids and streamers of lillies of the valley.

Matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. R. J. Greenwald, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and the best man was the bridegroom's brother, R. J. Greenwald. Ushers were Roy Greenwald and Joseph Lins. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mrs. M. J. Boyce, mother of the bridegroom.

Norwegian Program Tonight

The Norwegian Society, together with the Sons of Norway and Normands Forbundet, have planned a program for this evening, on Norwegian Independence Day. At 8:30 tonight in the west ballroom of the Shoreham, the speakers will be Representative Harold C. Hagan of Minnesota and Colonel Munthe-Kaas, Military Attache of the Norwegian Embassy. The film, "Wings for Norway," will be shown and dancing will follow the program. Members of the staff of the Norwegian Embassy will attend the event.

Mrs. Stilwell and Daughter to Be Feted at Tea Party

Chinese art, in the classical sense, will be the leading topic for discussion at a tea which Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke is giving at her home this afternoon at 5 p. m.

Many members of the Washington Committee of United China Relief, Inc., are among the guests who have been invited by Mrs. Brooke to meet Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell, jr., and her daughter, Miss Alison Stilwell.

Miss Stilwell is recognized as one of the first Occidentals to master the Oriental technique of painting. Her paintings are at present being shown in the C. T. Loo gallery in New York, and it is hoped that they may later be available for an exhibit to be sponsored here next month by United China Relief.

Expected at the tea this afternoon are Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Mrs. McNutt is chairman of the committee now outlining plans for the Chinese exhibit probably to be installed at the United War Relief Center next month.

Other members of the local United China Relief committee who have been invited into meet Mrs. Stilwell and her daughter include Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Col. and Mrs. Julius I. Peyser, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, the Rev. John Magee, Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarney Little, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck.

SCF Members To Have Meeting

Members of the Save the Children Federation of Washington will hold a meeting this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Irene Caldwell.

Purpose of the meeting will be to formulate plans to supply 6000 children of the southern Appalachians with clothing and toys next Christmas. The recent "Bundle Days" drive, sponsored by the group, came to a close several weeks ago, but packages of clothing and shoes have continued to come in and arrangements will be made at the meeting for the packing and sending of the additional articles.

Attending tomorrow's meeting will be Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, who will paint the faces on the Christmas dolls; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Vera Randall, Mrs. Junior Owens, Mrs. Albert Warner, Mrs. Robert LeBarron, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Lorton Sims and Mrs. Mary McClaussen.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

Main event of interest in Middleburg over the weekend was the wedding Saturday evening of Miss Mary Ester Moller to Lieut. (j. g.) Benjamin Franklin Lucas, jr., W. S. N. R. of Baltimore.

The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's step-father and mother, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Delancey Nicoll, jr.

Officiating at the service in the garden of the home was the Rev. D. Campbell Mayers, rector of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Middleburg.

The bride, who is the daughter of Charles George Moller of Camden, S. C., was given in marriage by her uncle, Capt. J. MacDonald White. Her gown of white marquisette over satin was of bouffant style, with tight fitting bodice and short sleeves. Holding her finger-tip length veil was a juliet cap of family lace and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Miss Jane Moller, twin sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She was attired in white marquisette, with clusters of spring flowers on the shirt and she carried a bouquet of matching blossoms. Lieut. Donald M. Peek, jr., served as best man.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Benjamin Lucas of Baltimore and the late Mr. Lucas. Following the service, a reception took place, and the couple left later on a Northern wedding trip.

Among the out-of-town guests were the bridegroom's mother and his sister, Mrs. Millard Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Peek, sr., of Baltimore, Mrs. G. W. White and Miss Phyllis Harriman of New York.

Mrs. Morris Parris entertained members of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club on Wednesday at 1 o'clock luncheon at her home near Marshall, Va., when there were 24 present to enjoy the buffet meal, sitting at small tables arranged in the dining room and about the lower floor of the house.

Afterward a meeting was held with Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison, president of the club, presiding. Mrs. Reginald Vickers of The Plains, gave an interesting and informative talk on ideas she had gotten from the annual meeting of the Garden Club of America, in New York. Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard, brought a paper she had prepared on the extermination of moles in the garden and lawn, and it was decided to buy war bonds with money the club has on hand.

At the executive meeting held before luncheon two new members were elected to the vacancies in the club. Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, jr., of Washington and Upperville, Va., and Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, jr., of Middleburg, Va.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Henry Fairfax, who opened her home, Oakham, near Middleburg this week after having spent the winter in Richmond, Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, Mrs. Reginald Vickers, Mrs. William Slaughter, Mrs. A. D. Pollock Gilmour, Miss Lilias Janney, Mrs. Edwin Rust, Mrs. Frederick Sharp, Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mrs. Algernon Davy, Mrs. Arthur C. Marshall, Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, Mrs. Armistead Welbourn, Mrs. Southgate Morison, Mrs. Houston Gaddis, Mrs. Walter McK. Jones, Mrs. William Clifford, Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard, Miss Julia Whiting, Miss Clarissa Fleming, Mrs. Charles Baird, and Miss Elizabeth Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, who have been spending the winter at their cottage near Clearwater, Fla., returned to their home, Windover, Middleburg, this week for the summer months.

Sir Harry Oakes, Bart., of London and Nassau, Bahamas, and Lady Oakes were the guests the past week of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ellis at Oakhurst, Leesburg. Sir Harry is a brother of Mrs. Ellis. Miss Shirley Oakes, attending the Baldwin School, near Bryn Mawr, Pa., was also a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis.

Purely Personal

Julio Balbuena, First Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, and Senora de Balbuena are at the Ambassador during their stay in New York.

Mrs. Robert Edmund Flowree of New Orleans is in Washington to visit her daughter, Mrs. Oliver W. Hammonds, and her baby son. Captain Hammonds is at present on duty outside of the Capital.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty has left for Westport, Conn., where she will open her summer home, Little Cedars. She plans to be away until October.

Mrs. Emerson Howe is spending several days in New York and was guest of honor at a luncheon on Thursday given by Mrs. Fenton B. Turck, a frequent visitor to Washington. Mrs. Turck entertained in the Persian Room of the Plaza. Other guests were Mrs. M. Harris Hammersley, Mrs. Julius McHenry, Mrs. Walter J. Berbecker, Mrs. Leonard Feathers and Mrs. M. Leach Shepard.

Wessels Safe in Sweden

Maj. Karl Wessel, former military Attache to the Swedish Legation, and Mme. Wessel have safely arrived in Stockholm, Sweden, it has been announced. The news has been a great relief to their friends, who had heard rumors that the Wessels were stranded en route.

HOUSEWIVES' WARTIME MILK BOTTLE Pledge

I will not "hoard" empty milk bottles. For empty bottles, kept at home, thrown in the trash or the incinerator, waste vital materials, manpower and transportation—and that is one way to hinder America's War Effort. I promise myself that I will return all bottles promptly—to my milkman or to the store where I buy milk.

(Signed)_____

Cut this out . . . sign it . . . tack up in your kitchen as a daily reminder to return empty milk bottles promptly.

JANE ARDEN — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

BOTH HI AND JANE TRY TO INTERVIEW BEN EASON, THE INVENTOR--WHEN THEY ARE REFUSED HI STEALS A RIDE ON THE REAR BUMPER
I'VE BEEN WATCHING YOU IN THE MIRROR--JUST WAITING UNTIL WE COULD BE ALONE
SO YOU COULD GIVE ME AN EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW, EH?
YEAH--RIGHT OVER BY THAT TREE--
YOU CAN'T DO THIS TO ME--I ONLY WANTED A STORY-- SHUT UP--I'M TIRED OF YOUR WHINING!
I WISH I KNEW HOW MUCH THAT FELLOW KNOWS--
BUT IT DOESN'T MATTER--IT WON'T DO HIM ANY GOOD!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

AFTER SITTING ON GUARD BEFORE SAMUEL COLLINS' DOOR ALL THRU THE NIGHT, SUPERMAN'S X-RAY VISION REVEALS TO THE MAN OF TOMORROW THAT THE DIPLOMAT IS NOT IN HIS ROOM!
LOOKS LIKE I SPENT AN UNCOMFORTABLE NIGHT FOR NOTHING!

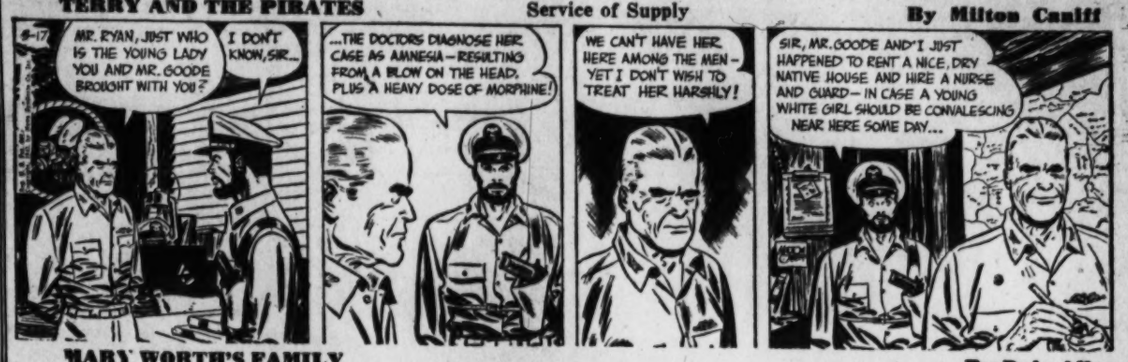
NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Service of Supply — By Milton Caniff



MR. RYAN, JUST WHO IS THE YOUNG LADY YOU AND MR. GOODE BROUGHT WITH YOU?
I DON'T KNOW, SIR...
...THE DOCTORS DIAGNOSE HER CASE AS AMNESIA--RESULTING FROM A BLOW ON THE HEAD, PLUS A HEAVY DOSE OF MORPHINE!
WE CAN'T HAVE HER HERE AMONG THE MEN--YET I DON'T WISH TO TREAT HER HARSHLY!
SIR, MR. GOODE AND I JUST HAPPENED TO RENT A NICE, DRY NATIVE HOUSE AND HIRE A NURSE AND GUARD--IN CASE A YOUNG WHITE GIRL SHOULD BE CONVALESCING NEAR HERE SOME DAY...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

STRANGE BUSINESS, MARY WORTH! YOU---! GOING TO A FORTUNE TELLER! BUT TOM CLAIMS IT'LL HELP SOMEHOW TO EXPOSE LOU VARZONI---AND I DO WANT TO BREAK UP PATTI'S INFATUATION FOR HIM!
BUT WHY DID TOM INSIST ON MY WEARING THIS? MY BOY SLIM ISN'T IN THE SERVICE---
THE BACK OF MY NECK FEELS CREEPY--AS IF SOMEONE IS STARING AT ME---!
SHE'S OKAY, SAM! LOOKS LIKE NICE PICKINGS, TOO! GO TELL HER I'LL TAKE HER!--- AND HOW I'LL TAKE HER!

MICKEY FINN — A Fair Example — By Lank Leonard

WELL, HOULIHAN, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF PHIL BETTING ME TEN BUCKS THAT HE'LL BE MARRIED TO "PINCHIE" O'NEIL'S WIDOW BY AUGUST?
WITH THE HELP OF MY LUCKY CHARM, OF COURSE!
SHE WOULDN'T EVEN LOOK AT YOU! SHE'S KEEPIN' COMPANY WITH HOGAN, THE PLUMBER!
YOU MEAN SHE WAS KEEPIN' COMPANY WITH HOGAN!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN "WAS"?
HOGAN HAS BEEN OUT OF TOWN FOR MONTHS--WORKIN' IN A SHIPYARD IN MAINE!
YOU SEE WHAT I MEAN, CLANCY!

MR. AND MRS. — The Tell-Tale Question — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

GOT A NEW HAT?
YES, BUT I DON'T KNOW WHETHER I LIKE IT OR NOT
I THINK IT LOOKS SWELL ON YOU
YOU DON'T THINK IT'S TOO GIDDY FOR ME, DO YOU?
GOSH, YOU MUST BE GETTING OLD
OLD? WHAT DID I SAY THAT MAKES ME SEEM OLD?
THAT'S WHAT ALL WOMEN OVER FORTY ASK ABOUT A HAT--IS IT TOO GIDDY FOR ME?
HOW'D YOU COME TO KNOW SO MUCH ABOUT WOMEN?

DIXIE DUGAN — Blue Monday! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

HEY!!
JUST LOOK AT THAT SUN!
LET'S LOOK AT SOME EGGS, FIRST!
WHO SAID "BLUE MONDAY"?
YEH!--WHO COULD BE BLUE ON A MONDAY LIKE THIS?!
LOOKS LIKE THE CHILDREN COULD!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Peril Ahead — By Frank Martinek

PILOT TO WINSLOW... COAST GUARD NOTIFIED... ABOUT FIVE MILES AWAY... WILL PICK UP SURVIVORS.
GOOD.. LET'S GET BACK TO THE BASE, PRONTO!
COMMANDER WINSLOW, THOSE FELLOWS IN THE MERCHANT MARINE ARE SURE DOING ONE GRAND JOB.
YOU SAID IT... THEIR WORK IS SUPERB. IT'S COURAGEOUS MEN LIKE THEM WHO WILL WIN THE WAR.
PILOT TO WINSLOW... DIRTY WEATHER AHEAD, SIR. WIND ON OUR QUARTER IS PUSHING US NORTHWARD... AIR GETTING BUMPIER BY THE MINUTE.
I DIDN'T REALIZE IT WAS CLOUDING UP LIKE THIS!
COMMANDER WINSLOW, SHE'S ICING UP AND GETTING HEAVY AND LOGGY!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

YOUR DAUGHTER SAID YOU WANTED TO SEE ME, MR. FLINT---!
EXACTLY! COME IN, YOUNG MAN!
NOW, TELL ME, ROPER--WHY DID YOU COME TO BALE'S PARTY WITHOUT AN INVITATION?
YOU'LL ADMIT YOU HAVE A MIGHTY ATTRACTIVE DAUGHTER--!
YES, I'D BE WILLING TO FORGIVE YOU--AND CONSIDER IT A HARMLESS PRANK OF IMPULSIVE YOUTH--
BUT--UNFORTUNATELY--MY DAUGHTER'S PEARL NECKLACE DISAPPEARED--ABOUT THE TIME YOU WERE DANCING WITH HER!

DONALD DUCK — No Grass Grows Under His Feet — By Walt Disney

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

UNAWARE OF KING'S IMMINENT ARRIVAL AT HEADQUARTERS, MERRY GLOATS OVER THE SUCCESS OF HER SCHEME, WHICH INVOLVED INTRODUCING HERSELF AS KING'S WIFE--
5-17
LADY LUCK IS WITH ME! KING WASN'T ON THE MAIL PLANE--BUT INSTEAD---
--THE INSPECTOR HANDS ME THE VERY AIRMAIL PARCEL I'VE WAITED FOR!
THERE IT IS! THE DIAMOND! NOW I'VE GOT TO SCRAM--AND QUICK!
THE MAIL PLANE SHE JUST LEAVE, KING!
YES, PIERRE--WE MADE GOOD TIME AT THAT!

Asthma Mucus Fought Thru Blood

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.
